Russia Sells Matches.
New Light on Lincoln.
The Idle Parade.
Religious Agitation.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

COUNTRIES OF Europe, especially England, are wondering how they can avoid competition and dumping of cheap Russian goods, and, at the same time, eagerly accept money that Russia spends in purchase of machinery and raw materials.

This country, a little more virtuous, or, perhaps, more foolish than the others, has cut down Russian purchases in this country by more than half within a year. That may be high morality, but it is poor business.

IT WILL TAKE more than words, or dislike of Bolshevist theories, to conquer Russia's industrial campaign, backed by able producers and good salesmen.

For instance, when United States soldiers look closely at the little box of matches supplied by the government, they will see written in small type "Made in Russia."

The army needed matches, and asked for bids. And the lowest bid, 25 per cent lower than any American bid, came from Russian matchmakers.

Under the law, according to Maj. Barry of the Quartermaster Department, the Army is compelled to accept the lowest bid.

PSYCHIATRISTS, assembled at Toronto, propose a "sterilization law," to reduce the percentage of feeble-minded persons. Sterilization would prevent birth of children, not otherwise interfering with those to whom it might be applied.

ONE PSYCHIATRIST proposes to show that Abraham Lincoln suffered from a strange mental malady, with a long name, which reminds you of Lincoln's advice to those that told him Gen. Grant drank too much whisky. He advised other generals to get some of the same whisky.

If psychiatrists could inject some of that Lincoln mental malady into some of our modern statesmen, it might be helpful.

AT 2:45 P. M., on Lafayette street, New York City, yesterday, a procession of unemployed men were on their way to the City Hall. Some had small red bands around their arms. They carried dozens of banners, telling what they wanted. One read:

"Three square meals a day."

Another:

"Don't starve, fight."

A number were Negroes. One, quite young, carried a sign:

"No deportation of the foreign-born."

He was not foreign-born, but carried the sign, smiling broadly. It is for him "a pleasant walk, a pleasant talk, along the briny beach."

For a majority, including one gray-haired white woman, it is "bloody earnest."

YOUNG MEN at the head of the procession sang: "Shall We Gather at the River?" Perhaps because they all knew the words, and the police could not object to them.

Those responsible for the government and the public peace should begin thinking of next winter and the possible effects of another protracted period of unemployment.

"The Americans are docile," as Northcliffe said, but when they turn, they are not so docile.

There is no panacea for idleness except a job or a dole.

A "handout" from a Red Cross, Salvation Army or other charitable institution will not do.

THERE IS REASON to believe that the sudden violent outburst of anti-Catholic hostility in Spain, Italy and elsewhere will be overcome by conciliatory measures.

In Italy, the Pope has forbidden all Catholic processions and demonstrations of any kind, outside of churches, and forbidden the official Vatican organ, the Osservatore Romano, to publish hostile comment on the Fascist government.

Mussolini, on his part, has forbidden the Italian press to continue the publication of news articles and editorials calculated to foment anti-Catholic hatred.

IN MEXICO, Leopoldo Ruize y Flores, apostolic delegate, according to the Associated Press, "calls upon Catholics to avoid political meetings, held in the guise of literary reunions."

SUDDEN, ENTIRELY unexpected anti-Catholic outbreaks have appeared in different places. For instance, in Scotland, Catholic religious processions on the streets are broken up by mobs in two cities, in one case the mob actually stoning the image of the Virgin Mary, carried in a Catholic parade.

Millions whose feelings are deeply wounded by such demonstrations will remember that religion has always thriven under attack and persecution.

THE SPANISH republic, following the custom in revolutions, abolishes titles of nobility. No more high sounding titles will be recognized by the government: each must sign his name to documents.

Ninety-seven dukes, 1,310 marquesses, 900 counts and other "noble" odds and ends, become simple Spaniards. They may call each other anything they like privately, however.

This is particularly hard on the 97 dukes, entitled to keep on their hats in the presence of the king. They can still keep on their hats, but there is no king.

IN THE FRENCH Revolution, many notables, in the first excitement, gave up their titles voluntarily.

STRIKERS' MARCH CUTS MINE FORCES

ITALY HOLDS CATHOLIC LEADERS

Exile Faces Chieftains of Societies; Negotiations For Settlement Continue

ROME, June 3.—(AP.)—A number of leaders of Catholic Young People's organizations have been arrested on political warrants signed by the prefect. After being questioned, they were held for further disposition, which may mean confinement to the Island of Lipari.

Among those arrested was Attorney Corsanego, honorary general president of the Italian Catholic Young People's Organization.

GIVEN WARNING

He received from the prefect a "political admonition," a measure which usually immediately precedes exile to the prison land.

Foreign Minister Dino Grandi left the church and state issue entirely out of his annual report to the Senate this afternoon, confining himself to less controversial matters.

It was known beforehand that he would not discuss the conflict between the government and the Vatican at any great length, for that issue is entirely in the hands of Premier Mussolini, but it had been expected that he would touch upon it.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE

Despite the fact that negotiations continued to be carried forward, tending toward the renewal of amicable relations, the government announced it would not revoke its order dissolving the juvenile societies affiliated with the Church Action.

In a speech to the College of Chaplains of Immigrants, Pope Pius last night heaped ridicule upon official statements by the Italian government in connection with the dissolution of all the Catholic youth clubs in Italy.

That dissolution, he said, violated the right of the church to form and guide young people and violated also the natural law, "made for the good of souls," under which men form themselves into associations.

FORTUNES WON IN LOTTERY

NEW YORK, June 3.—Huge fortunes were won by Americans today in the Irish Hospital and Canadian Veterans' sweepstakes on the British Derby.

Joseph Kennedy, West Indian Negro, who held the only Irish Hospital ticket in this country on Cameronian, which won the race, will collect $150,000. He went to work as usual today in a Boston mission, but dropped to his knees in prayer when he heard the result on the radio. Later he said he had come to this country to seek his fortune, adding:

"This is my idea of heaven come true. The first thing I'll do is bring my wife and children here."

Louis Tanner, Hopkinsville, Ky., and C. M. Peterson, Tulsa, Okla., held tickets on Cameronian in the Canadian sweepstakes and expect to win between $150,000 and $250,000.

Four other Americans won fortunes on the Irish sweepstakes. They were Thomas O'Connor, railroad engineer, of New York, and George Hill, of Norway, Me., who get $75,000 each for the tickets they held on Orphan, finishing second, and S. L. Horowitz, New York, and William Coyle, Cincinnati, O., elevator operator, worth $50,000 each from tickets on Sandwich, which came in third.

Mrs. O'Connor heard the results on the radio and said she was "too excited to talk," but that her husband would be home at 6

Hearst Urges Job Fund of 5 Billions To End Depression

Publisher in Radio Talk Calls on U. S. to Act.

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 3.—William Randolph Hearst, in a radio address last night, declared that $5,000,000,000 promptly spent by the government in the employment of labor would promptly restore prosperity.

Speaking over WABC and a nationwide network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, he urged the government to borrow that huge sum to relieve the economic situation, saying:

"This is not a time to reduce the national debt through burdensome taxation and thereby reduce prosperity.

"It is time to increase the national debt and increase the expenditure of the government in public works in the employment of labor and thereby increase prosperity.

"Then out of prosperity to pay off the debt."

'END PROHIBITION'

If the government desires further to increase its income, Mr. Hearst said:

"Let it end this folly of prohibition which does not prohibit and substitute government control of the manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages, and so secure for itself, on the basis of Canada's excise income, an additional income of a billion dollars a year."

Mr. Hearst spoke from the WABC studio at the personal invitation of William S. Paley, president of the Columbia System, from 11 to 11:15, eastern daylight saving time. His address was broadcast through 82 of the Columbia chain's affiliated stations.

Mr. Hearst attributed the economic collapse to overcapitalization and the failure of industry to give labor an adequate share of the increased profits that prosperity brought.

PROSPERITY PLAN

As to the cure for the situation, he declared the federal government should take the lead in restoring confidence by acting promptly to employ labor. He said:

"A gigantic appropriation by the government, not a dole, but

3 CHILDREN PERISH IN FLAMES

Mother Helpless to Save Them From Barn; Braves Smoke in Futile Rescue

By JAMES BAUBIE
Staff Correspondent.

NEW ALEXANDRIA, Pa., June 3.—Three children were burned to death today in a barn on Lower Flood Ridge farm while their mother and neighbors made frantic efforts to rescue them.

They were Clay, 7; Evelyn, 4, and George, 3—the children of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rubble, who have tilled the farm for eight years.

Their mother, Etta Rubble, 42, tried to force her way through the smoke and flames to reach the hayloft where the three were imprisoned.

BRINGS LADDER

Failing in this, she attempted to place a ladder to a small window through which hay was loaded into the barn. Flames cut off the children's escape there.

Mrs. Rubble said:

"About 8 o'clock this morning I was working in the kitchen when I heard the children scream. They had gone out to play only a few minutes before.

"I ran out and saw smoke coming from the barn. The children were shrieking in the hayloft. I had my baby, Ruth, in my arms. I didn't even wait to lay her down, but ran into the barn. Smoke and flames cut me off from the hayloft entrance and drove me out.

"I took the baby into the house and carried a ladder to the hayloft window, a small hole in the side of the barn.

FLAMES BAR EXIT

"I got it up all right, but the children could not get on it, because just then flames swept across the window.

"Then I screamed for help and neighbors came. Some of them ran for my husband, who was loading posts in the woods. Others tried to get the children out, but it wasn't any use."

The barn burned. A horse died in the flames and a large amount of grain was destroyed.

New Alexandria firemen estimated the loss at between $10,000 and $15,000.

A fifth child, Frederick, 8, had gone out to play with the others, but did not enter the barn.

Both the mother and father took their bereavement with a stoic calmness. The father said:

"It's terrible, but we still have Fred and Ruth."

Ruth is 2 years old.

European Beauties Arrive for Contest

Divorce Sought By Nancy Carroll

NANCY CARROLL . . . FILED SUIT ON SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

PARK WILL NOT CALL KLINE

There were four outstanding developments today in preparation for the grand jury investigation into the alleged irregularities in the City Supplies Bureau:

1—Revelation that Ruth Gordon and David Rosenberg, of the Penn Tire Company, and Henry Braun, a wholesale meat dealer, have been served with subpenas, giving indication that the city contracts for tires and meat were to undergo early inspection.

2—A statement from District Attorney Andrew T. Park that he would not subpena Mayor Charles H. Kline. It is customary, it was pointed out, never to summon before a grand jury any person whom the prosecutor believes may face prosecution in the case under consideration.

3—Authentic information that at least 12 additional subpenas are to be served this week, in addition to the 22 already issued.

4—Warning from Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfit, in charge of the office

Star and Writer, Wedded 7 Years, Part With Kiss

NEW YORK, June 3.—(INS.)—Nancy Carroll, petite redhaired Paramount movie star, is getting a divorce from Jack Kirkland, playwright.

Both Nancy and Jack admitted it today.

The suit brought by Nancy, was begun today in Nogales, Mexico, by her attorney, Harry H. Oshrin. It marked the seventh anniversary of their marriage.

The divorce will go through as a matter of routine within three months. Nancy said today:

"It speaks for itself. I have nothing to add to it except to say that I am sorry it had to become public at this time."

PART FRIENDS

And Jack said:

"Nancy and I have parted the best of friends. Neither of us wanted this to happen, but it was unavoidable.

"We have a great deal to be thankful for, and can look back upon some very happy years. We hold each other in admiration and respect. Nancy is genuine, unspoiled and entirely worthy of the place she has won for herself. Somewhere along the line, romance just went out of the window. There is nothing dramatic to be told. We both came to the realization that to continue being happy we must respect each other's independence."

PART WITH KISS

When Nancy and Jack left the lawyer's office after agreeing to the details of the divorce last week, they parted with a kiss, it was learned, wishing each other good luck.

Patsy, 5½ years, their only child, belongs to both of them, they agreed. Each is to have her custody for six months of the year. No alimony was discussed and there was no property settlement.

ARMED COAL POLICE ON GUARD

Only 130 of 1,500 Workers Reported in Pit; Union Plans to Extend Walkout

Only 130 of the 1,500 men employed at the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation mine, Montour No. 10, went into the workings today as a result of mass meetings and a demonstration at the mine, Frank Borich, secretary of the National Miners' Union, declared this afternoon after making a check with pickets and employes of the colliery.

Borich said union pickets at the mine learned by actual count that only 130 men went into the workings. "Grapevine" reports, Borich said, emanating from inside the mine through the cordon of state and industrial police and deputy sheriffs, were that only 31 men were taken in on the first trip, against the usual 250 men.

PLAN NEW PARADE

For the 36 mules taken into the mine, only 11 drivers were available, Borich declared, he learned. Police and deputy sheriffs said only about one-third of theminers at Montour No. 10 went out on strike. Company officials would make no statement as to the number at work.

Borich said the union will continue its effort to bring every miner out at the Montour workings, and that a mass meeting tonight, similar to the one last night, and a mass demonstration tomorrow like the one staged at dawn today, will be held to bring the rest of the men out.

In the Pittsburgh district the number of striking miners was placed by Borich at 2,400. Three Washington County mines, the Francis mine, with 180 workers; Tylersdale, with 200, and Van Voorhis, 300, have struck 100 per cent, Borich declared.

MEETINGS TO CONTINUE

The next step, to be taken as soon as all of the Montour No. 10 workers walk out, will be a dem-

WILKINS BEGINS POLAR CRUISE

NEW LONDON, June 3.—(INS.)—The submarine Nautilus, North Pole underseas cruiser, left New London for Provincetown, Mass., at noon today on the first leg of its trip to the Arctic. It expects to set out for Spitzbergen, Norway, within the next 48 hours.

Final standardization tests will be undergone at Provincetown.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, chief of the submarine expedition, was aboard with Lieut. Commander Sloan Danenhower, U. S. M., in charge of navigation.

Mrs. Wilkins was at the pier to say goodbye to her husband, who will meet Commander Donald B. McMillan, another famous polar explorer, in Provincetown.

Film Couple Start 'Trial Separation'

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 3.—(AP.)—Mervyn Le Roy, film director, said today he and his wife, Edna Murphy, were living apart for the present because "they could not get along." Beaverbrook Renews War Warning

League Membership Peril to Britain, He Repeats.

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Cable.

LONDON, June 3.—Lord Beaverbrook, noted British publisher, answering the daily attacks on him by the London News-Chronicle because of his frank avowal that Great Britain should withdraw from the League of Nations, said:

"I dread the peril of war which Great Britain's European commitments bring in their train."

The publisher, characterized as a "war monger" by the News-Chronicle, replied to the attack in a signed editorial appearing in his important London newspaper, the Daily Express, declaring:

"I am a pacifist, and no one more than I abhors the prospect of our sharing in another war.

DREADS WAR

"It is because I foresee the danger of another war and the danger of our being obliged to share in it that I took the stand against which you object.

"The League of Nations is a European concern, and is advancing rapidly towards the United States of Europe of which many continental statesmen are dreaming and—a more for the employment of a vast amount of labor at the prevailing rate of prosperity wages, would not only stabilize wages but would immediately set the machinery in motion for the restoration of prosperity; provided, of course, that the government EXPENDED the appropriation and did not set on it perpetually like a deluded hen on a procelain doorknob."

Mr. Hearst began his address by defining prosperity, saying:

"The basis of prosperity is the ability of the public to buy, plus, of course, the willingness of the public to buy. In other words, prosperity is based on the purchasing power of the public. When the public buys from the stores, the stores buy from the factories, the factories buy the raw materials produced by the farm and the mines.

"All these forms of activity employ labor, and the money circulates with profits to all classes. We were in the midst of such a prosperous period. Why did it not continue?"

OVERCAPITALIZATION

Here Mr. Hearst asserted it was not necessary to go to the war in China and the silver situation in India to find the reason, but that the real reason "is right here at home." Explaining that the cause is not lack of money, he turned to a discussion of overcapitalization and the evils that followed.

First he pointed out that improvements in machinery cut production costs tremendously, thus increasing the profits of industry. He added:

PROFITS FOR WORKERS

"Obviously some reasonable part of it (the profits) should have gone to the management of industry, but the greater part of it should have gone to the working masses. In other words, the increased profits should have been distributed largely in higher wages and shorter working hours.

"If this had been done, the shorter working hours would obviously have prevented any lack of employment, because a greater number of men would have been employed to fill out the working week.

"And if wages had increased in proportion to the productivity of modern machinery and the consequent increase in the profits of industry, the purchasing power of the public would have been enhanced and the consumption of all kinds of goods and products would have been maintained at a high level, or raised to a still higher level."

When profits increased in industry, Mr. Hearst said, labor got a small share and the rest were transformed into increased capitalization.

WHY U. S. SHOULD ACT

Turning to the remedy, Mr. Hearst said:

"Anyone who understands the meaning of prosperity and the reason why high wages tend to make prosperity can see at once WHY the government should act and HOW the government should act."

Here, after describing what a huge appropriation by the government would do, he added:

"Mr. Hoover REALIZES how prosperity could be restored. He has discussed the situation understandingly. Still neither the procedure nor the proposals of the administration have been on a scale at all commensurate with the magnitude of the problem."

Recalling that President Hoover, when a candidate, won many to his support by the "magnificent program of public improvements which he described as the main feature of his policy," Mr. Hearst said:

"What a splendid thought was this plan of national development for any time, but what a particularly glorious idea for the present moment of depression. . . .

HOOVER NEGLECT

"But Mr. Hoover appears since his election to have neglected to some degree his own ideas and to have adopted an attitude more in conformity with the ideas of the international bankers."

Mr. Hearst asserted it is perhaps natural for the international bankers to prefer to see American money go into foreign bonds, on which the bankers get a heavy commission, than into American bonds, on which they do not get such a commission. He added:

"But Mr. Hoover, President of the United States, should realize and, of course, does patriotically realize that the money which goes into American bonds goes into building up American interests and prosperity, while the money which goes into foreign bonds goes into building up interests and institutions to COMPETE with American interests and DIMINISH American prosperity."

Mr. Hearst said Secretary Mellon, of the Treasury, seems to be concerned "more about his record in reducing the national debt than he is about the far GREATER question of restoring prosperity." He said:

"This is not a time to reduce the national debt through burdensome taxation and thereby REDUCE prosperity.

DEBT INCREASE

"It is a time to INCREASE the national debt and INCREASE the expenditure of the government in public works in the employment of labor and thereby increase prosperity.

"Then out of prosperity to PAY OFF THE DEBT."

If the government desires further to increase its income, Mr. Hearst said:

"Let it end this folly of prohibition which does not prohibit, and substitute government control of the manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages, and so secure for itself, on the basis of Canada's excise income, an additional income of a billion dollars a year."

URGES HEARST PLAN ON HOOVER

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP.)—William Randolph Hearst's plan for relief of unemployment, as expressed in a radio address last night, was taken up today by William I. Siorvich, Congressman from New York, in a telegram to President Hoover. It read:

"In view of the timeliness of of Mr. Hearst's statement I would respectfully request that you immediately call into conference the great captains of industry and representatives of finance, labor, agriculture and commrce for the purpose of conferring on the plan advanced by Mr. Hearst and plans of other patriotic American citizens.

"These leaders should consider all possible means by which the economic situation can be stabilized and 6,000,000 people put to work."

Hoover and Couzens Discuss Rail Merger

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP.)—Chairman Couzens, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, today called on President Hoover to discuss railway problems, but he had nothing to say after the White House conference. Mr. Hoover and the Senator have disagreed over the proposed consolidation of astern lines.

PAYLESS YEAR, MINER QUITS

Matt Beschnick, striking miner at Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company mine No. 3, has a wife and eight children depending on him. He has worked in the mines for 20 years. He is a naturalized American citizen.

Today he exhibited three dimes—all that exists between this large family and starvation. But, he says, he might just as well starve and rest as starve and work.

He shows his payroll statement for the past year to support his claims. During the year ending with May 1, he says he did not draw a single cent, his entire earnings having been withheld by the company for groceries, rent, coal, explosives, etc., his records show.

Rent has taken most of his pay. His largest earnings for a two-week period were $56.50. The average pay today after two wage cuts is from $20 to $25. A year ago, Beschnick, a bratticer, earned $4.25 a day. Today he earns $3.50, so he strikes.

Extracting of Teeth Fatal to Woman

Shock from anesthesia caused the death last night of Mrs. T. Adams, 28, of 141 Ulysses street, in a dental office at Penn avenue and Sixth street, according to a report to the coroner's office. Mrs. Adams was having several teeth extracted.

The woman was the second to die in a dental office within the last two days. The first victim, an 8-year-old Carnot girl, died Monday after having a tooth extracted in a dentist's office in Coraopolis.

HELENA, Mont., June 3.—(AP.)—A fee of a $5,000 for effecting a reconciliation between Walter J. Hill, son of the railroad builder, and Mrs. Mildred Hill, former Follies girl, was upheld as reasonable by the Montana Supreme Court.

T. J. Walker, Butte attorney, filed suit for the fee following application last July for the dismissal of the divorce case which had been filed by Mrs. Hill, and a cross complaint filed by Hill.

onstration and march on the Westmoreland mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, where 1,000 men are employed, according to the union's secretary. More than 3,000 men, women and children will march on the Westmoreland mine, Borich declared.

Mass meetings in Allegheny, Washington and Westmoreland couonties, held in an effort to bring out all coal miners in Western Pennsylvania, will continue through tomorrow, the secretary said.

PARLEY FAILS

A meeting yesterday between the strike committee and C. C. McGregor, vice president in charge of operations of the Carnegie Coal Company, brought no results, the company offering 42 cents a ton for loading, according to Fagan, but refusing to consider the checkweighman demand of the strikers. The company's offer will be presented to the men, according to Fagan, but there is little likelihood of it being accepted, he said.

The left-wing branch of the strike, the National Miners Union, a branch of the Communist Party of America, succeeded in holding mass meetings, at Coverdale and Library, yesterday. Several hundred miners vowed their allegiance to the strike movement at each of the gatherings, which was called for the purpose of creating interest in the mass demonstration at the Pittsburgh Coal Company's Library mine this morning.

2,000 OUT IN FIELD

There are about 2,000 men on strike in the Library field which includes Castle Shannon, Mollenauer, Horning and Coverdale, according to National Miners' Union officials. Last night's mass meeting drew representatives from these towns last night. Frank Sepich, of Bellaire, O., was the speaker. Art Walley, district organizer, also spoke. Both men berated the Lewis administration in the United Mine Workers and called upon the miners to join the demonstration today, which they predicted would be a 100 per cent walkout.

Several other impromptu speakers introduced themselves from the crowd, which included men, women and children

DAVIS BLAMES MINE OWNERS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., June 3.—(INS.)—Bituminous coal operators are responsible for the chaotic conditions in Western Pennsylvania coal fields, U. S. Senator James J. Davis said here today as he left on a tour of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Asked to comment on the widespread strike in the western mine fields, Senator Davis said:

"Operators seem to work by the law of the jungle instead of the law of man.

"It's a case of dog eat dog. There is no reason why his industry should not be among the most prosperous in the country."

Senator Davis was particularly resentful at wage scales in the bituminous fields, declaring families are "barely able to exist" on wages now paid miners.

Horowitz, 35-year-old foreman in a printing plant, said his sudden wealth meant two things:

"I'll be able to take care of the old folks and possibly get married."

Hill, a lumberman and automobile dealer, said the money he won "wouldn't go out of circulation." He threw a pad and pencil into the air when he heard the result on the radio, and then left to confer with his wife and two daughters, one of whom graduates from high school tomorrow.

Mrs. Sadie Tanner danced a jig when she heard her husband had won first prize in the Canadian lottery. Her husband said he would "throw a big party," and give a new suit to his favorite barber.

The horse held by Thomas Sullivan, 1458 Belmont avenue, Pittsburgh, was scratched two days ago, but he stands to win about $4,165, which he said he would use to take a trip to Ireland, his native land. His ticket was in the Dublin sweepstakes.

"Our Locarno treaty obligations compel us to take one side or the other in any Franco-German quarrel, no matter what the cause of the quarrel may be.

"It may be as remote from us, economically and culturally, as Poland.

SLAYING HINTED IN DEATH OF ALIENIST

Woman Telephones Coroner 'Dr. Bell Was Murdered;' Funeral Service Held Up

By E. L. RAWLEY
Universal Service Special Cable.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., June 3.—Funeral services for Dr. Ralcy Husted Bell, noted author and alienist of New York, who was found shot to death, at first believed accidentally, at the artists' colony near here yesterday, came to an abrupt halt today as the result of mysterious telephone calls from Long Island which asserted Bell had been murdered.

A feminine voice declared in a midnight call to Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks County coroner:

"Dr. Bell was murdered. He was not shot accidentally by one of his own burglar traps."

SPEAKS FOR BROTHER

The woman asserted she was speaking for Frederick Bell, of 65 Lamont avenue, Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y., reported to be a brother of the dead man.

When Dr. Bell's body was found in his beautiful summer home, Sycamore Lodge, it was believed he had fallen a victim to a burglar trap which he had contrived.

The author of the telephone message told the coroner that Bell and two sisters would arrive here today to reveal further information about the alienist's death.

CREMATION DELAYED

Pending their arrival, the coroner agreed to hold up proposed cremation and funeral services scheduled for today. Dr. Sweeney issued a certificate of accidental death after making a preliminary investigation yesterday.

At that time he said:

"Dr. Bell just forgot the burglar trap when he opened the door of his home and the gun went off. His death was purely accidental."

PARK WILL NOT CALL KLINE

after Park and Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk left for Canada today, that any attempt to tamper with grand jury witnesses would be met by immediate criminal prosecution.

SUPPLIES QUERIES

Virtually all of the 22 persons already subpenaed had direct dealings with the Supplies Bureau while it was headed by Bertram L. Succop, dismissed by Mayor Charles H. Kline when the charges against the department began to gather weight.

S. S. Curtin and H. J. Wilhelm, of 4123 Penn avenue, were served yesterday, apparently to testify with Miss Gordon and Rosenberg, relative to tire contracts.

Eula Dyer, Succop's secretary, who now holds the same post with Col. W. R. Dunlap, his successor, yesterday was reported among those subpenaed. She said today that she has not yet received a summons.

The grand jury is expected to take up the investigation a week from tomorrow.

GO IN SECLUSION

Park and Clunk left for a Canadian fishing lodge at Buckhorn Lake, near Peterboro, Ontario, today, they said, to study in seclusion of the audit which Main & Co. made of the Supplies Bureau's affairs at the request of the Citizens' Committee. They were to return Monday.

The audit of bureau affairs made for the city by Price, Waterhouse & Co. was to be delivered to Controller James P. Kerr today.

The Citizens' Committee was understood to be taking an active part to prevent any possible tampering with witnesses. It is understood to have employed a number of private detectives to shadow persons subpenaed.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, governor of Pennsylvania, Republican, a candidate for president in 1932, evidently plans a campaign of plain speaking on the subject of corporations, quite in opposition to the general "Republican trend."

He starts with the proposition that several great industries should not be controlled by a few men. At the right time and place, and in the proper manner, he will be made to realize that real Republicans do not call that Republican politics, but "plain Bolshevism."

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, appropriately, and just in time, starts a training course for prison wardens, executive heads of prisons, and similar institutions.

Considering the size, and rapid growth of our present bootlegging-crime wave, it would seem desirable for all colleges to specialize in prison training.

Science has contributed the death chair to our "civilized" treatment of criminals. Colleges might well contribute trained managers.

PRESBYTERIANS TO CONTINUE FIGHT FOR CHURCH UNION

FINAL SESSIONS OF ASSEMBLY UNDER WAY

Birth Control, Dancing Clashes Avoided; Rebuke Given Federal Council

The Presbyterian Church will continue to work toward organic union, despite withdrawal of the Presbyterian Church South, the Rev. Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., said today.

Dr. Mudge told the General Assembly, meeting at Syria Mosque, that, although the action of the Southern Presbyterians is regretted, it will not halt negotiations looking toward organic union of all Presbyterian churches.

Churches which will continue negotiations include the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., the United Presbyterian Church, the Reformed Church in America and the Reformed Church in the U. S.

TO DISCUSS UNION

A meeting to discuss the union will be held at Princeton Theological Seminary in September.

Dr. James E. Clark, editor of the Presbyterian Advance, Nashville, Tenn., ascribes the withdrawal of the Southern group as due to a wave of reactionary sentiment which is passing through that church. This reaction, he says, was brought on by the moves to try for heresy the Rev. Dr. H. W. Smith, of Little Rock, Ark., and the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Diehl, president of the Southern University, at Memphis, Tenn., as well as to fundamentalist controversies. Dr. Clark said:

"Doubtless these incidents have caused the reactionary group to make a most vigorous effort to have only men of their views and attitude elected to their General Assembly, and they seem to have succeeded. The more progressive element is steadily growing in the Southern church, however, and my guess would be that this is about their last decisive defeat."

QUITS COUNCIL

The Presbyterian Church (South) also voted, yesterday, in its General Assembly at Montreat, N. C., to withdraw from the Federal Council of Churches.

Report of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, presented to the General Assembly today, showed the expected decline in moneys received for its work. The board recognized the continued depression throughout the world, the anti-religious program of the Soviet in Russia, and the move for freedom of worship in Spain.

The meeting today marked the centennial of the Western Foreign Missionary Society. The Rev. James H. Kelso, president of the Western Theological Seminary, is presiding.

Censuring the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America for its stand on birth control, and decision to make no ecclesiastical pronouncement on the subject featured yesterday's session of the General Assembly. The action was taken when the report of committee bills and overtures was adopted.

"MADE RIDICULOUS"

A motion that the General Council consider the reorganization of the Federal Council, made by the Rev. M. A. Matthews, of Seattle, was carried. Action of the council on birth control has made the Presbyterian Church look ridiculous, the Rev. Matthews said.

Although the assembly criticized the stand of the council, it decided to remain a member. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, of Pittsburgh, said the Presbyterian Church had been instrumental in the establishment of the council, and had been active through its 30 years of service.

Such a council is indespensable, he said, holding it had been foremost in advocating co-operation in union at home and abroad, and that it had rendered important wartime service.

DANCING ISSUE SHELVED

Side-stepping direct reference to dancing and card playing in churches as charged by the Rev. Dr. John E. Fleming, of Brooklyn, the overtures committee recommended that the General Assembly "admonish" pastors and sessions "to keep Christian character growing and Christian life loyal in the face of marked current tendencies." The report referred to charges of dancing and cards merely as "amusements."

A resolution by the Rev. Benjamin F. Paist, of Lancaster, O., asking that President Hoover designate a country-wide day of prayer, and one by Dr. Matthews, further declaring support of the Eighteenth Amendment as "in line with our unbroken traditions," were approved.

OFFICER SHOT BY ROBBERS IN GUN BATTLE

Pair Flees in Stolen Auto As Policeman Balks Store Burglary on North Side

A North Side policeman was shot down early today in a gun battle with two robber suspects he surprised in the rear of a drug store at Perrysville and Wilson avenues. The men escaped in a stolen automobile and were later seen in the Perry highway. The patrolman, O. W. Hopkins, 33, a Negro, of 1313 Reedsdale street, is in Mercy Hospital suffering two bullet wounds in the right thigh.

Thirteen shots were fired in the battle, which aroused the community. Residents found the officer lying on the pavement.

An hour after the shooting an East End man whose automobile had been stolen reported that he had recovered his car after chasing two men whom he saw in the machine. The men escaped.

BILL ABOLISHES JOB OF SCHOOL VISITORS

Joker in Mansfield Measure Discovered as Gov. Pinchot Attaches His Signature

Signing of the Mansfield omnibus school bill by Gov. Gifford Pinchot today disclosed that the amended bill carried a jojker in the form of abolition of the boards of school visitors in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Leaders of the school system here today told how the measure had crept into the omnibus bill in the form of an amendment, escaping their attention until the closing hours of the legislative session.

RELATIONS PLEASANT

Marcus Aaron, president of the Board of Public Education, and Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, both emphasized today that the board in Pittsburgh has always maintained pleasant relations with the visitors.

Abolition of the School Visitors originated in Philadelphia at the instance of the Pennsylvania Elections Association and the Committee of Seventy of Philadelphia. They stated that they had two objects in view, that of ridding the school machinery of the two cities of excess parts and that of shortening the ballot in the years of municipal elections.

SERVE WITHOUT PAY

The school visitors served without pay, with the exception of their secretaries, who were paid $25 a year. One was elected to serve in each ward. They were required to visit the schools in their districts, recommend needed changes to the board of education and were permitted to recommend men to fill janitorial positions in the elementary schools. It was recently disclosed in the Sun-Telegraph that several boards had failed to organize and were not functioning.

Aaron issued the following statement today:

"The bill to abolish the school visitors did not originate in Pittsburgh. The board's relations with the boards of school visitors have been amicable and pleasant."

State Senator W. D. Mansfield, sponsor of the omnibus bill, said:

"I am not familiar with the functions of the boards in Pittsburgh. With the voting machines, I think it would be impossible to put their names on the ballot."

GOVERNORS END CONFERENCE IN TURMOIL

Fiery Speeches by Pinchot And Ritchie on 'Real Issues' Halt Oratory

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., June 3.—The governors of half the states of the Union brought their twenty-third annual conference to a close today in an atmosphere of ruffled tempers and an intangible feeling about the futility of it all.

So long as the state executives stuck to the carefully prepared program of innocuous subjects the meeting was harmonious enough. But when, as happened last night, issues were introduced which promise to be acute in the next presidential campaign, the conference atmosphere became suddenly surcharged with tension and suspicion, and the managers promptly called off the last day's program and left the day open to social engagements.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, (Dem.) of Maryland, challenged the governors to discuss "real issues" in their annual conference. Among these he enumerated unemployment, which he described as the gravest problem before the country today; prohibition, which he linked up with the tax problem, which was generally touched upon by several governors; the tariff, power control and kindred matters.

Ritchie's challenge followed Gov. Gifford Pinchot's slashing attack on the power trust, and the combined effect of the two speeches left most of the 20-odd governors gasping.

Gov. Pinchot is considering the advisability of calling an independent economic conference, of national proportions, to meet in Harrisburg and discuss unemployment and business problems. He discussed it with Gov. Roosevelt, among others before leaving today.

'TEX' AND GANG SAIL FOR HOME

LE HAVRE, France, June 3.—(INS.)—Texas Guinan, New York night club queen, bitterly turned her back today on stern French officials and offers of marriage as she and her gang re-embarked on the S. S. Paris to return home. She said:

"I'm going back to New York, where people are still human."

The blonde hostess, who was given a great big hand—a barring hand—by the French government, fired one last shot:

"I have decided to return to the United States immediately, but will return to France later when my papers are in order."

The entire troupe of beautiful girls who accompanied La Guinan, were under heavy guard as sailing time drew near to prevent a repetition of last night's escapade that sent police scurrying through the streets of Havre in a frantic search for three of the damsels who "dined out" with three male friends, but returned late at night

2,500 ATTEND MISSION MEET

The Rev. Dr. Francis Shunk Downs, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, was the principal speaker at a meeting held by the church in the interest of foreign missions last night in Syria Mosque. PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., June 3.—Experimenting with a rope cost Donald Boyd, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Boyd, of this city, his life last night when he accidentally hanged himself in the bathroom of his home.

Pittsburgh Student Jailed 2 Days Names Bootlegger

A Pittsburgh student in the University of Michigan is facing a charge of possessing liquor after remaining in jail two days rather than reveal the name of the man from whom he bought it, Associated Press dispatches from Ann Arbor revealed today.

He is James L. Slocum, 19, of 1120 Lancaster street, president of the freshman literary class.

He and his roommate, Lawrence L. Heideman, 18, of Larium, Mich., were arrested Saturday after, police said, the bottle of liquor had been found in their room.

They were released after giving authorities a telephone number which they said they called to obtain the liquor.

The number proved fictitious and they were rearrested Monday. They were held without bail late last night when, police said, they furnished the name of the bootlegger.

They will be given a hearing on the liquor possession charges Tuesday.

Coolidge Welcomes Rest Season for U. S. Leaders

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 3.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The vacation season is again near enough to require making plans for it. Many of our people are able to enjoy a winter trip into the southern portion of our country, but to most of us the time of relaxation comes in summer, when the attracion lies in the mountains and waters of the North.

Mr. Coolidge

In recent years possibly some who were responsible for management took too long vacations. Because we have had a difficult year and have many problems to solve, such persons may think of foregoing any absence from business in the immediate future. The fact is the brains of the country need relaxation and refreshment more than ever this season. They owe a duty to themselves, their business and their associates to get more than the usual period of rest.

The country will be further advanced in October if July and August find many visitors at the shore and in the hills. Just now we need that replenishment of body and soul that comes only in withdrawing from work and familiar scenes and seeking diversion in new activities and new surroundings. This year above most others the brain and the hand need to be replenished by rest.

CLARA BOW -:- Star Generously Spares Man Linked With Daisy -:- MRS. NIXON -:- Reveals Reconciliation Due To Child Born in Paris

Romance Story Kept Secret By Star

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc. Reproduction in part or in whole prohibited.)

CHAPTER XIV.

When Clara was on the stand in the Daisy De Voe trial she might have told many things. There is a story about a romance that Daisy De Voe had with a certain cameraman which Clara could have told and which is not a very pretty story, but the man who was involved went to Clara, got down on his knees, begged her not to reveal what she knew.

"Such a thing will ruin me and it will do Daisy harm. Please keep my secret," he pleaded.

Clara, who wouldn't have told even if this certain cameraman hadn't asked her to refrain from mentioning his name, kept the story to herself. She didn't tell of the $2,000 birthday present she gave Daisy De Voe. She didn't tell of the threat Alfred Mathes, Daisy's sweetheart made to her. No—because Clara is real and there has never been any thought of retaliation against those who wrong her.

We spoke a little while ago of 1926 being the jinx year of Clara's life. Perhaps we should have stated that it was the prize jinx year until 1930 came into the horizon. One thing after another happend to Clara in 1930—her trip to Dallas, Tex., and the newspaper notoriety which that brought were first, then the Cal-Neva episode in September, 1930.

Visits Nevada

It was Miss De Voe's bright idea that Clara might like a little relaxation and so she suggested the trip to Nevada. Rex Bell, Clara and Miss De Voe went to Cal-Neva, where Will Rogers, on location there, joined them at dinner the night of their arrival.

In telling about this episode Clara said:

"I had not been to Lake Tahoe, so Daisy and I decided to take a vacation there. I didn't know that it was a gambling place until after we reached there. After I had had dinner with Mr. Rogers, Rex Bell and Daisy, I began to play a games called 'Twenty-one,' which is also called 'Blackjack.' They gave me 50-cent pieces to play with and I signed some checks in blank telling the dealer to fill in the amount of the 50-cent pieces he had given me. There were four of these checks."

When the checks reached Los Angeles, the bank telephoned Clara and she found out for the first time that these checks totaled $13,900.

This Cal-Neva episode was unfortunate in that it brought reams and reams of bad publicity at a time when Clara could ill afford any more scandal. Daisy De Voe, taking advantage of Clara's plight, became more and more indifferent to her welfare.

Daisy Indifferent

"She would be gone for a day at a time," Clara said. "I would find that she had spent her whole afternoon at a motion picture theater. I could never locate her when I needed her. She would be out with her boy friend. I was paying her a salary for doing nothing. She resented Rex Bell and treated him as if he had no right in my house."

In those months that preceded her walking out act, Daisy was very indifferent. She grew more and more lax as time went on. Clara repaid her insolence and ingratitude by inviting Daisy and her much publicized admirer, Alfred Mathes, to dinner night after night.

"Then one memorable morning, I looked for her to dress my hair and she was nowhere to be found. When I got home from the studio that night I hurried up to her room, but she was not there—most of her clothes were gone.

"Where is Miss De Voe? I asked my housekeeper.

"I am sure I don't know," she replied, "she has been carrying her clothes out all day."

Letters Missing

Clara rushed to her own room and found that dozens of personal telegrams and letters as well as many of her canceled checks were missing.

"I needed those checks," Clara said, "to prove my expenditures to the government when I made out my income tax, but Daisy in her fury had torn them up and I have never been able to prove what became of my money. It was then I decided to discharge her."

Daisy, apparently seeing the handwriting on the wall, had decided to get her revenge.

"I invited Rex Bell for dinner one night after I became suspicious that Daisy had some scheme in mind," Clara said. 'Something happened,' I told him. 'So many of my letters and personal messages are gone.'

"Up to that time Rex had never said anything detrimental to Daisy. I shall never forget, we were sitting at the dinner table as we talked.

"'Clara,' Rex said, 'I hate to say anything against Daisy. I know you've always liked her, but I never trusted her and I feared that some day she would do just this thing.'

Clung to Faith

"Even then," Clara told me, "I couldn't believe that the girl in whom I had put such trust could prove so faithless. It Gilbert, came to me and said, 'Daisy De Voe called at my office and said that unless you pay her $125,000 she will tell all she knows,' that I realized that Daisy had never been the friend she professed to be—that she merely was playing her game in her own way."

Miss De Voe, who realized that perhaps she had taken a step too far, told Clara if she would give her her old job back all would be forgiven. But Clara, having had a taste of her treacherous friend, refused.

The reason given by the ex-secretary for her sudden departure from Clara's home on Bedford drive, Beverly Hills, was that she had overheard Rex Bell and Clara talking and threatening to dismiss her.

"She couldn't possibly have heard us discuss anything of this sort," Clara said, "for we had no such discussion. I think she was eager to get away for some reason.

"I think she was frightened when I questioned her about my bank balance," said Clara. "She always had some plausible excuse to show why I had spent so much money. I have learned since the trial that Daisy never neglected to buy herself a dress when she bought one for me. I liked her taste in clothes and often sent her to shop for me."

In tomorrow's installment Louella Parsons in her REAL life story of Clara Bow, tells how the "It" girl refused to yield to blackmail demands, and her sufferings as a consequence.

Clara's Future Depends on Recovery

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 3.—(INS.)—Clara Bow's future in the films will be determined when the flame-haired screen hoyden has recovered sufficiently to confer with him, B. P. Schulberg, production executive, said yesterday.

Schulberg, who had previously announced Miss Bow wanted to be released from her contract, said:

"What decision will be made on her request for retirement will depend upon a conference with her when she gets well. She is in no condition to talk business, so at the studio we are not making any future plans for her pictures."

Jealousy Complex Leads to Plans For Divorce

By CHARLOTTE NIXON-NIRDLINGER

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THIS is the eighth installment of her own life story by Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger who, after a sensationally brief trial in Nice, France, was recently acquitted of the murder of her husband.

In previous chapters she told of her meteoric rise from obscurity to the pinnacle of a beauty queen; how she met the wealthy Philadelphia theater magnate and, after a whirlwind courtship, eloped and married him—only to find he had another wife! There followed his divorce from his second wife, remarriage to Charlotte (who was wife No. 3) and the resumption of their quarrels.

Today Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger tells how her husband's jealous complex finally led both of them to seek divorce in the French courts, of the birth of her first child and her remarriage to Fred.

NICE.

No matter where Fred and I went in Europe the beautiful scenes, the gayety of Continental life was spoiled by his unjust jealousy. For instance, when we would come home after a stroll along a boulevard he would stand before me and comment upon the various men we had passed, tell me how they had stared at me and how he believed I encouraged their glances.

This, by the way, was before 1926 and I should like to stress it here in view of the fact that many of his friends believed his almost insane jealousy was the result of a severe head injury he received in an accident a year ago. Later on I am going to tell just how that accident did strangely affect him, but I am going to show also how, long before it, he had revealed his peculiarly suspicious nature.

After we returned to Paris, following a trip through Europe, Fred renewed his old charges that I was flirtatious—even though I hardly had dared look at a man. I decided then and there I could stand this no longer. I told him I intended to sue for divorce. Fred, in a rage, decided to sue for divorce also. But whereas I was able to prove he had been cruel in his treatment of me, the only thing he could say was that I had been "cold and indifferent."

Love and Jealousy

Here again, if you don't mind, I should like to pause and ask why husbands confuse their jealous nature with love. Real love, I think, has no room for jealousy and suspicion. I had tried to show Fred my love for him, but his distorted mind seemed to see in everything I said and did something terribly subtle and mocking.

The French divorce courts, with their usual whimsicality, solved our troubles for a time by granting each of us our petitions. In fact, my divorce was granted December 30, 1926.

Of course, Fred did not realize at the time that I was to have a child. It was in July, 1927—the Fourth of July, in fact—when my baby boy was born at the American Hospital in Paris. Mother came over to Paris from America to be with me. It was the two mother loves which kept me alive: that of my mother's love for me and mine for my baby.

Two weeks after the boy's birth, I developed severe pains in my legs. Oh, what torture it was. I almost wanted to die and nearly did, but my mother was there and dear little Junior. I couldn't. For 30 days I had fever that reached the top of the mountains, and agony beyond words. I wasn't able to move anything, but my arms and head. For three months I laid in wooden casts. When it came time to walk again, my legs were three times their normal size and I thought surely I'd be a cripple the rest of my life. Fortunately, my condition changed and I became normal again.

Fred Exultant

During this separation from Fred, he sent a flood of letters. He seemed to be exultant that he had a baby son. He wanted the child's picture and I sent him a photograph. There were more letters and cables. Finally he came over to Paris and pleaded with me to remarry him.

At first I refused. The strain of the past years had been too much for me. I could not bear to think of facing the future with Fred if he prolonged all his jealous suspicions. But then I thought that now I had a baby Fred would become reasonable. Besides, I felt that he—and not I—was in a position to bring the boy up with all the comforts of life.

After much persuasion, I decided to remarry Fred, thinking the baby might change him and make him kinder to me. The wedding took place in Paris July 12, 1928. But much of my sorrow and despair, my husband instead of being nicer to me, became more jealous, more violent than ever before.

All our friends in France knew only too well that I had little time for anything or anyone but my child. Yet the jealousy of my husband persisted.

However, our quarrels in Paris reached such a stage that I told Fred I wanted to return to the United States. He readily consented because he was becoming homesick. I thought, when we returned to his home in Atlantic City, it would mean a new life of hope and joy for us—but how terribly I was mistaken was soon to be revealed.

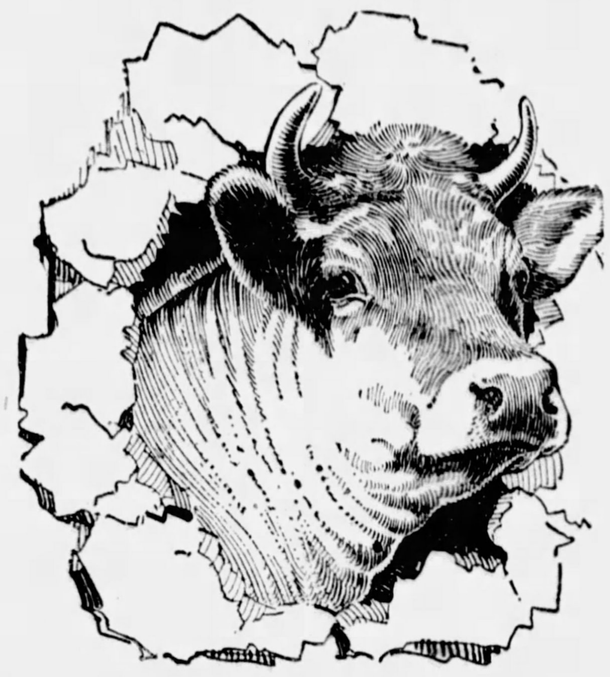
Want a Good Steak?



You can get one here tomorrow—or any day! The beef we are now selling is better quality than ever before—changed conditions in the raising, marketing and grading of beef has improved the quality, widened the selection and—as we are always on the alert to take advantage of new conditions and pass the benefits along to our customers—we are taking full advantage of the opportunities now presented to purchase these fancy quality, extra selected and graded cattle.

We sell nothing but fine, native, heavy, corn-fed steers—regular show cattle—and U. S. Government inspected before and after dressing.

No exhausted old cows, young cows or underfed yearlings are ever sold at Donahoe's.

Try one of these fine steaks. As a very special inducement we have priced them extremely low.

From A Steer Like This

U. S. Government Inspected

Come Donahoe Steaks

Prime, native, corn-fed, healthy, contented steers are the kind from which come Donahoe's steaks and roasts—but ONLY after the meat has been U. S. Government inspected.

No matter how fine in appearance the beef, we refuse to sell it at Donahoe's until it has the official, stamped O K of the U. S. Government.

We value our customers too highly to ask them to take a chance on the meat they buy. It is a wise and necessary precaution to insist that all meat you buy is "U. S. Government Inspected"—especially in the summer time.

Arthur Brisbane, Noted Writer, wrote on May 27 in his column, "TODAY"

"The public should remember that good meat is essential to vigorous health. There is no substitute for it."

Unwrap Meat When You Get It Home!

As soon as meat reaches the home it should be unwrapped, put on a plate and placed in the refrigerator.

Frequently meat is put away with the wrapping paper on it. When wrapped meat has been carried around while shopping in the warm weather, the heat gets to the meat, and when such wrapped meat is placed in the refrigerator, the best keeping results are not obtained—it takes the cold air in the refrigerator too long to penetrate the wrappings

—the air inside the wrapping is still warm and is endangering the meat—so unwrap the meat immediately in order that the refrigerated cold air can get to the meat at once.

RENEW OUSTER MOVES AT OLD CITY HALL

'Friend' of Working Girl Told to 'Get Out'; Woman Declares She Will Stay

Attaches in the office of new County Building Superintendent H. K. Cashdollar today were to read a letter from the County Commissioners' office to Mrs. Helen Uptegraff, 60, who has moved into the Old City Hall, Smithfield street, telling her to get out.

The letter is the latest move in the county's four-week fight to evict Mrs. Uptegraff from the building, after she had been given permission by the county authorities to establish a refuge there for unemployed women.

INTENDS TO STAY

Meanwhile, Mrs. Uptegraff declares:

"This is the only place I have to stay. And I am staying."

The county's attempt to have the woman leave the building up to now has consisted of turning off the electricity, attempts of county officials to have her release the key to the building and to give up her letter of permission from the County Commissioners.

When her lights were turned off, Mrs. Uptegraff simply said:

"I get enough light from the street lamps."

James Routley, chief clerk in the County Commissioners' office, said:

"She is in the building under false pretense. We thought she was an official of the Y. W. C. A."

CHARGE FALSE PRETENSE

Mrs. Uptegraff explains she intended to band together 300 girls and charge them $5 a month for sleeping quarters, and with the money to buy beds and furniture. At present Mrs. Uptegraff is the only woman using the quarters, but she claims to have found work for 38 unemployed women during the time she has been using the building.

The building superintendent's office said they did not know what action would be taken, if the woman refused to leave after hearing the letter read today.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO HAVE TO PAY 3 MONTHS RENT AT ONE TIME?

—then why pay for life insurance that way?

If you tried to pay your rent the way you pay your life insurance premiums you would be in constant difficulties.

Insurance Premiums seem much harder to handle than they really are just because they are paid on a quarterly, or semi-annual or annual basis. Coming a little irregularly, they come a little unexpectedly . . . and they are larger than if they were on a monthly basis. If you paid them monthly, there would be a certain definite charge each month, and you would organize your spending to accommodate it, just as you do with rent and other fixed charges.

The Colonial Trust Company offers you a plan for handling your life insurance premiums that way. You merely deposit one-twelfth of your total premiums each month and The Colonial handles all payments for you. You earn the lowest possible rate in that way (the annual payment rate) and, besides, The Colonial pays you interest on the deposits you make.

Let us send you information about this plan. Fill in the coupon below.

Cotton goes "High Hat"

Cotton is having the time of its life, right now, high-hatting all the fabrics which have snubbed it in the past. It snapped out of the front-porch, neighborhood class when Chanel, Lanvin, Augustabernard and Poiret began sponsoring it, and now it is accepted in the best society for all summer occasions from sports to evening . . . You will find cottons in almost every dress section at Horne's, treated with such imagination and chic that you'll want a whole flock of cotton frocks.

June is so full of a number of things that I'm sure everyone must be happier than kings are in these uncertain days. Every day there's some new event of note added to the social calendar of this popular month.

A notable event of mid-June will be the formal opening of the new addition to the Fox Chapel Golf Club, which is so large that the old clubhouse looks like the addition! I've heard that June 13 is to be the opening day. There'll probably be a tea and ever so many dinner parties. Just what other social festivity will mark the opening hasn't been decided upon yet, I understand. Thruston Wright is chairman of the house committee.

The J. Denniston Lyons, of New York, formerly of Pittsburgh, who are perennial visitors Sewickley Horse Show time, will be the guests this season of Mrs. Henry R. Rea at her home, Farmhill, Sewickley Heights. Before this year the Lyons have always opened their own in the Heights, but they recently sold their Sewickley estate to the Maitland Alexanders.

This romantic month of June is bringing plightings of troth as well as weddings. A notable one is just being announced today.

Announce Betrothal

The James H. Childses, of Albermarle street, are making known the betrothal of their daughter, Mary Childs, to William T. King, son of the Tarrant P. Kings, of Milton, Mass.

Mary, who's one of the best-liked girls in the social set, is a graduate of Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., and Mr. King is a graduate of Harvard.

Just a few days ago, it seems, Mrs. James M. Schoonmaker announced the engagement of her daughter, Gretchen, well-known horsewoman, to Dr. Raymond Elmore Earp, son of Wiley Sherrod Earp, of Selma, N. C. And today her wedding date is announced. She'll wed on June 15 at the Schoonmaker Sewickley Heights estate.

Will Wed In June

Another June wedding took place yesterday. Miss Anne Crosby, of Belfast, Me., became the bride of Ralph Miller Johnson, of New York, at 12:30 o'clock in the drawing room of the Schiller home, Sewickley Heights. The bride is a sister of Mrs. William Bacon Schiller, of Follyfoote Farm.

The bride wore aquamarine blue chiffon, with hat and slippers of Indies brown. Dudley Davis, of New York, was best man. After a wedding breakfast the Johnsons left by motor for White Sulphur Springs.

Miss Rose Vera Block To Marry on Saturday

Miss Rose Vera Block, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Block, of Wightman street, has chosen Saturday as the day for her marriage to Rabbi Abram Maurice Granowitz, son of Mrs. S. P. Granowitz, of Beechview. The ceremony will take place in the Free Synagogue, New York, with Dr. Stephen S. Wise officiating. A dinner and reception at the Hotel Pennsylvania will be given later. Rabbi Granowitz and his bride will reside in New York.

King School of Oratory Commencement Friday

The one hundred and fourth commencement of the Byron W. King School of Oratory is to be held Friday evening in the school auditorium. Tomorrow evening an Egyptian pantomime will be given under the direction of the seniors.

Clever Radio Program Given in Regent Square

A clever original radio program, in which Mrs. F. B. Hill, Mrs. A. F. Heineman and Mrs. B. G. Spindler took part, was one of the features of the Regent Square Woman's Club annual luncheon, held yesterday, in the Stanton Heights Golf Club. Mrs. David E. Lloyd was in charge and the outgoing and incoming presidents, Mrs. D. E. Whysall and Mrs. Roy L. Slocum, were honor guests. On behalf of the club, Mrs. Harry C. Hutchinson presented both officers with flowers, the presentation speech being in original verse. Music was provided by a trio, Dorothy Eades, pianist; Helen Wilman, cello, and Katheryn Rice Letterman, violin. Mrs. W. M. Alrith was toastmistress.

Women Sponsoring Play Of Seniors at P. C. W.

Prominent women are patronesses for the Pennsylvania College for Women senior play, scheduled for tonight and tomorrow night at the college. Among them are Miss Isabel Chalfant, Mrs. William Nimick Frew, Mrs. Pitt O. Heasley, Mrs. George M. Laughlin III, Mrs. James Childs Rea, Mrs. W. H. Rea, Mrs. Kenneth Seaver, Dr. Cora Helen Coolidge, Mrs. C. H. E. Succop, Mrs. George W. J. Bissell, Miss Helen Marks, Miss Marian Jobson and Mrs. J. H. Beal.

CLUB NOTES

A group of poems particularly suited to vacation times will be presented by Mrs. J. Charles Wilson when she reads over KDKA during the State Federation radio period at 3:15 tomorrow.

Daugherty Appeal Date Plea Argued

COLUMBUS, O., June 3.—(AP.)—Arguments on a motion of the state to advance the hearing date in the appeal of Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank at Washington Court House, were heard by the Second District Appellate Court yesterday. Daugherty is under sentence of 10 years for having abstracted and misapplied funds and falsified records of the bank.

Leech Farm Home Contracts Awarded

Health Director C. B. Maits today announced awards of contracts for construction of a new $11,487 home for Dr. John Shilen, superintendent of Leach Farm. Construction will be undertaken under four contracts, each of which was awarded, Maits said, to the lowest bidder. There is a $14,000 bond issue available for the work.

Deputy Constable In Bethel Named

Judge George V. Moore in Quarter Sessions Court today appointed John Mishunas, 21, a miner of Bethel Township, as deputy constable. Twenty residents protested the appointment on the grounds that there was not enough business to warrant the naming of a deputy.

Richland Township Votes School Bonds

With a majority of 22 votes, residents of the school district of Richland Township yesterday voted in favor of the $65,000 bond issue for purchasing a site and erecting a school.

A dinner for women of the graduating class of the University of Pittsburgh is being given this evening at 7 o'clock in the Heinz House by Dean Thyrsa W. Amos.

Founder of French B. P. W. Speaks At Dinner

An exchange of business and professional women between countries in order that they may learn the business methods and the languages of other countries is one of the aims of the French Federation of Business and Professional Women, Mme. Laudner, its president, told the Wilkinsburg B. P. W. Club last night at a dinner in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. Mme. Laudner, who is here for a visit of several months, gave a charming talk to the 60 women who represented, not only the hostess organization, but the Pittsburgh, New Kensington and McKeesport clubs as well.

Mme. Laudner speaks a fluent and excellent English that is more French in its inflection than in its accent. She told of the rapid growth of the French federation, sketched a few of its outstanding personalities and told of its program of work and entertainment. French women, accustomed, as they are to individual work, do not have "the habit of clubs," she said, and American women have much to give them in the way of inspiration, cheer and friendliness.

Dr. Mildred Rogers, of New Castle, Pennsylvania B. P. W. president, whose guest Mme. Laudner is, introduced her as "mother, grandmother, musician, business woman and charming hostess," for the visitor from overseas has entertained Dr. Rogers and other members of the good-will tours at her Paris home. Dr. Rogers also announced a meeting of Western Pennsylvania B. P. W. clubs at Conneaut Lake over this week-end in Mme. Laudner's honor.

Week-End Meeting

There were vocal solos last night by Robert Topping, accompanied by his wife, and assembly singing included the French national anthem. The heartiest kind of applause greeted the nominating committee's report that Mrs. Janet M. Snyder had accepted the presidency for another year and in appreciation of her leadership and administrative ability, Dr. Mary E. Coffin presented her with a platinum filagree pin set with a sapphire. Leather-bound travel books with their names on the covers were presented to Dr. Rogers and Mme. Laudner on behalf of the club.

Boyd; recording secretary, Miss Hannah Brown; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lovetta Greenall; treasurer, Miss Agnes Ostrom; editor, Miss Mary G. THE LATEST MODE IN SMART SUITS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 3.—The new coats designed for going places are very smart and do the most flattering things to the wearer. We like coats to wear en route that feature smart simplicity with a well-disguised note of the practical. Fuss is avoided, but yet the traveling coat must not be too severe and uncompromisingly tailor-made. This year the fur trimmed coat of this type is not so popular; instead we have coats that reach the goal of smartness through the medium of clever cutting and smart detailing. A good coat of this caliber is not expensive, but it is a good investment as it fills so many uses even when the wearer is at home and is good for more than one season and countless automobile trips.

SKETCHED FOR TODAY'S page is a very smart coat, nice enough to meet the sartorial demands of the most exacting traveler. It is from the new Lucile collection, a collection that has been extremely successful and widely praised. The coat is of navy blue homespun and achieves a bolero in one piece with deep pockets, by the aid of clever cutting. The buttoned sleeve pieces, too, are interesting as details. Leather buttons in navy blue add a smartly harmonious note.

CROSS COUNTRY CYCLIST HERE

Robert Patton, 19, Portland, Ore., messenger boy, who left his home city in February to ride a bicycle to Portland, Me., and back, stopped here last night on his way home. He arrived in the eastern city April 18 and left on his return April 30.

On his trip he has worn out two pairs of tires and expects to re-tire when he reaches Indianapolis.

He left home with two other riders, who dropped out at El Paso. The trip is being made on a wager made by the American-Canadian Bicycle Club.

Bruening Slashes Germany's Budget

BERLIN, June 3.—(INS.)—Twelve hours prior to his scheduled departure for Chequers for his conference with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, of Britain, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening was putting the finishing touches today to an emergency financial decree which aims at eliminating Germany's 1,000,000,000-mark ($250,000,000) budget deficit by heavier taxation and reduction of government expenses.

Sales Show America Retains Sweet Tooth

CHICAGO, June 3.—(AP.)—The American sweet tooth last year was about as sweet as ever. Candy weighing 1,335,617,903 pounds was consumed in this country last year. This was only 2 per cent less than in the "prosperity year" of 1929, it was disclosed at the annual convention of the National Confectioners' Association.

Dean Asks Co-Eds Not to Take Jobs

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP.)—The greatest service girls graduating from Barnard College can render the nation at present, in the opinion of Acting Dean George W. Mullins, is to have the courage to refuse to work for gain. At class day exercises he asked the graduates not to compete with the unemployed.

Lasky's Artist-Wife Displays Paintings

LONDON, June 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Bessie Lasky, who had never used a brush until nine years ago, has exhibited 49 paintings at a Bond street gallery. She is the wife of Jesse Lasky, film magnate.

CHURCH UNION COMPLETED

Completion of the merger of three large Presbyterian congregations, two on the North Side and one downtown was announced today. Members of the First Presbyterian Church, Arch and Diamond streets, and the Central Presbyterian Church, in Sandusky street, unanimously approved the proposal for union made by the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street.

Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Church, said the new congregation will be known as the Second Presbyterian Church, and will be located in North avenue, North Side. It will have a congregation of 2,000.

Boy Starts Truck On Wild Dash; Safe in Crash

Robert Bravar, Jr., 3, of 420 Duquesne avenue, Rankin, started a bakery truck down the steep grade near his home today, and although he was in the machine when it crashed into a brick garage he escaped unhurt.

He jumped from the machine and ran to tell his mother of his ride. James Petrina, driver, had parked the truck to make deliveries.

The double garage of Christian Goodman, 503 Kenmawr avenue, Rankin, and an automobile owned by W. J. McBride, 423 Kenmawr avenue, were damaged.

HONOR DAMROSCH :-: Noted Conductor In Fiftieth Year :-: ON RADIO

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Fifty years a musician! Deems Taylor, John Erskine, Reinald Werrenrath and Frances Alda get together on NBC-KDKA at 9:30 tonight to honor Walter Damrosch, beloved dean of American orchestra conductors. Damrosch himself, far from tottering in his seventy-ninth year, picks up the baton to lead a symphony in his own works. Werrenrath sings again Damrosch's arrangement of Kipling's stirring poem, "Danny Deever." Otherwise you must exercise a keen buying eye in your radio shopping tonight. Little Jack Little pops up at an earlier hour than usual; we bet Dick Powell will be found at the set in his dressing room at 7:15 when Frances Alda sings his favorite, "Song of Songs." it's a bet also that you'll enjoy Tampa's 8 o'clock feature on WCAE, the last of the summer season and employing all the sound effects he can muster.

Ruth Etting

Gladys Rice and other artists on the WCAE program at 8:30 are to do their stuff from the eighty-second floor of the Empire Building; we discovered the secret of Ruth Etting's success when we interviewed her at the William Penn Hotel some months ago. It's plain modesty. Check up on us at 10 o'clock on WJAS. You've seen his name on magazine covers lots of times, James Montgomery Flagg, who submits to a Grantland Rice interrogation, WCAE at 10:30.

Question a Day:

Have Amos 'n' Andy broadcast from other cities than New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh?—W. D., Beltzhoover.

Answer—You mean on the network. Yes. But these three cities provide the best and most inexpensive outlets. Remember they did a broadcast from Washington, D. C. many months ago. The boys like to associate with the staff of KDKA and try to stop here when traveling between New York and Chicago.

Notice last night the snap in those "blackout" sketches of Henry and George? The explanation is that Tom Tarrant, the writer, was an official timer in the aviation service during the war and sent planes off every half-hour by blowing a whistle. Tom became so adept at timing these planes that he gave up handling a watch. It is said that he can hit the time of these short sketches "on the nose."

Studio Lights

Ted Husing writes that he will be this way soon on his trip to the Ryder Cup golf matches in Columbus, O., the last week in June . . .

They wanted machine gun bullets at KDKA the other night and not a machine gun in sight! . . . Ed Harvey grew a dozen gray hairs thinking up an effect and in his excitement tore up a telephone book . . . Eureka, it was just what he wanted . . . needless to say, large numbers fell!

Antony warned Caesar to beware the "Ides of March" . . . but it hasn't meant a thing in the merry lives of Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, who share the same birthday, March 15 . . .

Billy Rose's baby boy has been named for his dad . . . Bill writes much of the continuity you hear from KDKA . . .

Yes, the National Oratorio Society is coming back in November this year . . . and the "Conclave of Nations" feature over Columbia, also . . .

It's up to you to decide for yourself . . . someone says that the "hit" song of the week played daily by Andy Sannella's Soups Orchestra is chosen from 36 popular tunes judged discreetly (sometimes harshly) by a board of three NBC musicians . . .

Russia's five-year plan is to be given a thorough airing on the CBS waves starting this Sunday . . .

Virginia Kendrick, lilian contralto of Brookline and KDKA protege, has smashed the finals in the Philadelphia tests for the national audition and is to be heard from WFI (560 kc.) on Thursday night at 7 bells . . .

Ed Wolf, half of the Vincent Lopez combination, has lost his job press-agenting the Spaniard leader . . . all because he booked Lopez in Mahanoy City, Pa., against the wishes of Hotel St. Regis, who later made it very tough for both gentlemen . . .

Jessica Dragonette has renewed her Friday night contract for six more months . . . Habor Lights, NBC sea drama, moves from Saturday to Sunday night beginning June 14 . . . The Gold Medal Express is to change its style next Monday (KDKA) . . . Asked as to whereabouts of his Nit Wits, Bradford Browne pens us that "Prof. R. U. Musclebound has been in Kamchatka, Gabriel Horn in jail and Aphrodite Godiva insipid," but promises a return to CBS-WJAS waves Monday night, June 22, at 10:30 . . . There's prosperity at downtown sports stores, where Pittsburgh announcers and artists buy up golf balls daily preparing for that big inter-station match.

Congratulations!

THE LOUDSPEAKER : By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, June 3.—The art of debunking, so popular in the republic today, is not practiced to excess on the radio. It's confined for the most part to the speaking styles of various radio personalities and to such enterprises as big game hunting.

Broadcasters are chary folk. They are ever on the watch for what the performers still call "a kickback." It wouldn't do for them to offend big business or big shots. But big game—that's another matter. . . . Well, it's good to learn, even on the radio, that the so-called African jungle looks like any city park and is less dangerous. . . . Cuban dance music is becoming fainter and fainter. It uses up too much energy in the summer time. There's nothing like a nice cool Viennese waltz—from the fountain labeled Johann Strauss.

Most of the musical pep business on the air channels is inspired by high-powered executives . . . Maybe, that's what distinguishes a high-powered executive from a low-powered one—his insistence on musical pep in radio programs . . . Whip up the blood, that's their motto, and a snap of the fingers to arthritis and arteriosclerosis . . . The most enduring pep of all and most infrequently encountered on the radio is that supplied by the good right arm of John Philip Sousa . . . Plays with radio angles continue to be presented but the great play of radio, particularly the commercial side of radio, has yet to be written.

Imitators of Floyd Gibbons are becoming almost as numerous as those of Rudy Vallee . . . If you would know British calm at its height it will pay you to cup an ear tomorrow to the dear old Darby. Most of America is holding numbers on the race. We shall soon know whether we can charter a yacht for that trip to Tahiti. And be able to say "crazy with Tahiti" and mean it . . . The stories behind songs should keep the radio gaekwars busy for years . . . And now it's Irvin S. Cobb who is to tell why we love the old songs best. Hope the broadcasters are not trying to make a crooner out of Cobb . . . Won't be long before the Schmeling-Stribling fight. Hope they bring Ma Stribling to the 'mike.' Always wanted to hear Ma.

Wonder if we'll soon hear Texas Guinan from Paris. . . It's a mad world, this radio world. And getting madder. . . . You never know what you're going to hear. Even the "Star Spangled Banner" played on Japanese instruments from Tokio. Or do you prefer Tokyo? . . . . Something you don't hear is profanity . . . . Wonder if Gandhi has radio personality . . . . What has become of Red Grange? . . . . The radio has little time for the imitations of barnyard animals. It is just as well . . . It seems a decade since we heard "Singin' in the Rain." No song had a more phenomenal rise or a more sudden fall.

MINE FIRE PAY PACT HELD UP

Pending approval of a proposed amendment, Council has held up an ordinance authorizing an agreement with Crafton Borough sharing the expense of extinguishing a mine fire on the McShane property, part of which is in the Twenty-eighth Ward and part in Crafton.

Council has spent $16,000 on the experiment and Crafton is obligated for $3,338.53 of that amount. Contractor John F. Casey was employed formerly and ceased work only when the appropriation was exhausted.

The pending ordinance would appropriate an additional $16,000, of which $4,000 would be paid by Crafton. The proposed amendment would permit a "cost-plus" contract, under which Casey could be given the work without the necessity of advertising for bids, as the first contract was let as an "emergency" measure. Engineers declared it would be impossible to estimate accurately the cost of the job.

Ex-Spanish War Vet Commander Dies

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP)—Walter Jones, 54, national commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans in 1915 and 1916, died yesterday at his summer home at Westport, Conn.

Real Estate

A brick and shingle home, 408 Dickson avenue, Ben Avon, has been purchased by George M. Eaton from Alice H. Dusenberry through the offices of the Porter & MacDowell Company. The house is on a large lot. According to the brokers, the asking price for the property was $14,000.

The contract for laying the sewer lines in Frankstown Estates, new residential plan in Penn Township, has been let, according to E. B. Hulley, president of the estates.

Four cars of sewer tile have been ordered for the job by A. Dullus, contractor, it is reported. Steady progress has been made the past few days on the houses in the development. Two are nearing completion and are now open for inspection. Plans are complete for five more homes to be started shortly.

President Hoover will be asked to consider the possibility of establishing, by federal legislation, a new system permitting the discount of mortgages through a new central bank, as a result of action taken at the final session of the twenty-fourth convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, held last week in Baltimore.

A resolution approving this plan and calling for further recommendations from local real estate boards on the practical ways to work out such new machinery was passed by the delegate body at the convention.

Practical measures to make home ownership easier, to stabilize realty values, to improve home design and to ease the tax burden on the owners of real property were acted upon during the Baltimore meeting.

SEEK TO CANCEL OLD CITY BONDS

Controller James P. Kerr has submitted to Council an ordinance authorizing the cancellation of three bond issues for a total of $216,000 approved by the people in 1910. The issues included $100,000 for improvements to wharves, $50,000 for a bridge across Sawmill Run and $66,000 for the extension of Second avenue from Glenwood Bridge to the easterly city line.

Kerr pointed out that the bonds had not been used, and he requested cancellation so that the total could be restored to the city's credit, because:

"There is an implied obligation to the electorate to use bonds within a reasonable time."

VOTE MACHINES OVERDUE

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 3 (AP.)—Although a contract with the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, of Baltimore, called for the delivery of 195 voting machines to Schuylkill County by June 1, none has yet been received, it was said today at the offices of the county commissioners.

The commissioners did not indicate when they would consider the situation or what action might be taken.

Under the original contract, the company was to deliver 100 machines by October, 1930. None was received then, and the commissioners extended the time until June 1. Later, 95 machines were ordered for delivery also on June 1.

The Poole company has the contract for 1,100 voting machines for Allegheny County. Delivery of demonstrators has been promised during June and the entire number by August 15.

Unsung New Yorkers

I PRESENT herewith a simple document that came to me in the mail the other morning. It comes from a man who is awaiting trial in the Tombs. I don't know who he is because he signs no name. I don't know his age and I don't know the nature of the crime with which he is charged.

At the end of his document was a little note. "You probably will not be able to use this," it read, "but I know that I have not inconvenienced you because they tell me your wastepaper basket is a huge affair. Thus there has been no harm done. I have given you very simply the story of one in the Tombs. The story of one of my days. Good luck to you."

So now as an Unsung New Yorker column—I pass that letter on to you. Maybe it will appeal to you just as it did to me. I trust it will.

7 A. M.—I awaken as the lights flash on. I open my eyes. Another day in the same routine. Another day to be sliced from my life. Just another day in the life of a fool.

7:15—Decide to get up.

7:20—Runners put out the breakfast. Breakfast consists of mush, bread, prunes and coffee. I try the coffee. One try is enough. The sink gets the rest.

7:30—The keeper opens the door. I sweep out the cell and mop up to the best of my ability. I never was a very good mopper-up. I miss the wife. I wonder if she misses me?

7:35—I look at the court list to see if my trial will be reached this day. No. Not on. This day will be just the same as all the rest.

7:45—Man selling cigarettes. I buy a package.

7:50—Two men selling fruit, coffee, toast, rolls. I buy coffee, toast and an orange. This coffee isn't so bad. Breakfast has cost me 25 cents.

8:05—I am permitted to have a walk after breakfast. I meet Harold Ryder, who once spent millions in the night clubs.

"Good morning," he says to me.

"Good morning," I say to him.

"How did you sleep last night?" I ask him.

"Oh, fair," he tells me.

"Well, so long," I say.

"So long," he says. Our conversations never vary.

8:15—One of the boys wants to know how the Yankees made out. I ask the keeper and he tells me they lost.

"They lost," I tell the boy who wanted to know.

"That's too bad," he remarks.

"Aw," says another, "the Athletics will walk in."

"Don't kid yourself," says the first. "The Yanks ain't through yet. They got the old fightin' spirit."

8:30—Keeper raps large key on pipe and sings out "all in." We go back to our cells a little happier. After all, half an hour out of the cell is not to be sneezed at.

8:45—Decide to finish book I was reading in cell last night when the light went out. The book has fallen into the sink. It's very annoying.

9:30—Keeper hands me two letters. One is from my wife. She tells me she will be down to see me today. That makes me very happy. The other letter is from my lawyer. He wants to know if I have managed to dig up the rest of the money for him. That doesn't make me so happy.

9:45—I decide to get a shave from the barber. It's a bit costly under present conditions—but I must look nice for the wife.

10:45—Back in my cell after getting a two-bit shave. I feel my face and smile with satisfaction. I was lucky today. Only three little cuts!

10:15—I relax on the bed and think. Ask me what I am thinking about and I will tell you I don't know.

11:15—Runners dish out the soup for dinner. It is not chicken.

11:30—I light a cigaret and walk up and down. When I have finished, I again light a cigaret and walk up and down. This is something I do very well.

12:15—Man selling papers. I buy two of them and read everything, including the ads. I then reread everything, including the ads.

1:10—Keeper opens door and hands me slip for visit at 1:20. I step out of my cell, combing my hair. I don't know my face has grown dirty since the barber shaved me.

1:20—I step in a booth to see my wife. It is so dark, however, that I am barely able to see her. I want so much to tell her many things. But the place is crowded with visitors and I have to shout to make myself understood. There is so much noise I cannot remember the things I wanted to tell her.

1:40—I step out of the booth. I am hoarse.

1:50—Back in the same old cell. The wife certainly did look swell to me.

2:00—Keeper opens the door. I'm out for two hours of exercise, as it is laughingly called. The first and most natural step is to the window to peer out through the screen and the bars. While I am there a big fellow rushes to the window to see if his darling is looking up. He spies her and waves his handkerchief.

"Look at her," he cries. "That's my baby."

"You mean," I say to myself, "That was your baby."

2:10—I talk to some of the boys. The talk drifts to baseball. They argue exactly as they did in the morning. This time I say I like Cleveland.

2:55—Coffee man again, with sandwiches. This time he costs me 20 cents.

3:10—I light a cigaret and begin to walk.

4:00—I am still walking and still lighting cigarets when the keeper raps on the same pipe with the same large key. Back to my cell once again.

4:15—Runners start putting out the grub. Hash, tea and peaches. The peaches are fair. The hash and the tea I must respectfully refuse to describe.

4:50—The paper man comes along. I buy all the evening papers. I light a cigaret and begin to read.

6:10—The papers are finished. I pass them along to the boys who weren't able to buy any. I light a cigaret.

6:20—I start to read a book. It's "The Twister," by Edgar Wallace. I find it hard to get myself interested in it. I force myself.

9:50—I get ready to undress. The lights will soon be going out.

10:00—I fall into bed just as the lights go out. I toss. I twist. I squirm. Sometimes I am lucky enough to fall asleep quickly. Not often. I wonder if my wife is all right. She looked so sweet.

7 A. M.—I awaken as the lights flash on. I open my eyes. Another day to be sliced from my life. Another day in the life of a fool . . .

BUHL FUND PLANS MODEL HOME COMMUNITY

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

We have been listening to the police radio station and, so far as it goes, it's all right. The announcer will say, "No. 3 Emergency Car, go to —— Penn avenue. A holdup."

William Pfarr

But there are a lot of silent moments — moments, apparently, before the holdup men have rolled out of bed, or the hit-and-run drivers have started hitting and running.

We have an idea to exploit these idle moments by ballyhooing the police force. For instance:

"This is Station WPDU, broadcasting with the permission of the Federal Radio Commission and the ward chairmen. Our slogan is: 'Service 24 Hours a Day. Give Us a Try.'

"If any time you want a holdup solved, telephone us with your special request. Traffic jams, husband-and-wifey quarrels, burglaries solved on one minute's notice.

"If you desire an autographed photograph of your favorite policeman, write us, enclosing a 2-cent stamp for return postage."

The radio station is, of course, designed for Pittsburgh, but good-will could be created among the thirsty visiting firemen by broadcasting the addresses of the better speakeasies.

We listened to a group of people discussing what they remembered best of their younger days. One young woman recalled going over to the neighbor's and saying:

"Here's the cup of sugar back and my mother says to thank you a million times."

On the night before a double execution at Rockview recently a friend of ours asked Robert Elliott, the executioner, what he thought of capital punishment. Elliott said he didn't think much of it, that he much preferred life imprisonment. Then this friend, who was Dr. M. R. Goldman, asked Elliott whether his conscience ever bothered him and he said it didn't. With a shrug, he added that somebody had to pull the switch.

Elliott has electrocuted almost all of the recent first-page criminals—Irene Shrader, Glenn Dague, Ruth Snyder, Judd Gray, Sacco and Vanzetti. He said Irene was the calmest person he ever saw go to the chair, and Ruth Snyder the weakest.

Dr. Goldman still hasn't recovered from seeing those two young men from Wilkes-Barre electrocuted but Elliott, of course, wasn't bothered. He pulled the switch mechanically —that's all there was to it.

A few hours before the electrocution the doctor talked with one of the two who was to meet his end.

"How are you feeling?" the doctor asked.

"All right," the condemned man asked calmly, "how's yourself?"

The height of patience was reached by the gentleman who last week presented for a ride on the merry-go-round at Kennywood an aged ticket, dated 1918, which he said he'd been saving for an opportunity to use.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, June 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Just had an election out here for new councilmen and new sewers and more people got their crosses mixed up. This is "Cotton Week" all over the South. They had laid by their silks for a week and at all the luncheon clubs the speeches are to be [illegible] "cotton." That will, perhaps, disgust all the listeners with ever wearing cotton again. What the South needs is a week called "Steal the Farmers Cotton Seed Week." If the South was robbed of all their cotton seed for five years they would be loaning Mellon money.

CAMPUS SCENE OF SOLEMN SERVICES

Corpus Christi Observance To Include Procession, Benediction by Archabbot

By The Rev. CAMILUS LONG, O. S. B.
St. Vincent's College

LATROBE, June 3.—Thousands are expected to throng the spacious archabbey church and campus of St. Vincent College tomorrow morning to celebrate the feast of Corpus Christi with pomp and splendor.

Solemn mass will open the services at 9 o'clock, eastern standard time. A solemn procession with the Rt. Rev. Alfred Koch, O.S.B., bearing the Blessed Sacrament and imparting benediction at two ornamented altars on the college campus will follow.

The entire institution and thousands from neighboring parishes will take part in the grand public profession of belief in the Holy Eucharist.

DEEP SIGNIFICANCE

The celebration of Corpus Christi is one of greatest holy days on the calendar of the Catholic church. It is no mere external pageantry, but is an impressive and eloquent expression of belief in the central doctrine of Catholicity—miraculous presence of Christ in the sacred host —throngs drop reverently on their knees when the Blessed Sacrament under a silken canopy passes. Rich, poor, young, old, all bow to earth with eyes intent upon the sacred host in this religious pageant.

The significance and history of the feast is little understood by the general public not initiated in the doctrines of the Catholic church. The feast itself was instituted six centuries ago publicly to honor the institution of the Holy Eucharist on Thursday of Holy Week when the church is buried in deepest sorrow over the death of Christ.

Saint Juliana, of Montcornillon, Belgium, an orphan Augustinian nun, was the prime mover to have a special feast day for paying public homage to the institution of the Blessed Sacrament.

OBSERVED IN 1247

According to legend, she received a vision picturing the Catholic church as the moon with one dark spot on it, and through her zealous interest, petitioning bishops to create and promulgate the feast, the present Corpus Christi comes down through the centuries. It was celebrated the first time at the command of Bishop Robert in Belgium in 1247. Later it was adopted by many individual bishops and solemnly approved and commanded by popes, especially Urban IV, and became one of the greatest, most joyful feasts of the Catholic church.

Corpus Christi, as celebrated at St. Vincent, embodies all the splendor and religious pomp of the late middle ages.

What If Canada Puts Tariff On Tourists, Bottles?

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Yesterday Canada slapped a friendly 40 per cent tariff on American motor cars.

We will reciprocate by an affectionate reprisal. Canada will toss another good-will bomb at us. That will compel us to sob salty increases on Canadian goods.

It's all in fun. Tit for tat, butter and fat, blacklist my dog, I'll boycott your cat.

We don't want to get in trouble with Canada. That country has us in its hip pocket. It can't starve us. But it certainly can thirst us.

Suppose the tariff skirmish reached that stage where Canada placed an embargo on north-bound tourists and south-bound bottles?

They stabbed us in the dedicated cornerstone that time. They have us at their fermented mercy.

We may be head man with the ounces and the tons, but what can we do against a nation that still has a liquid measure?

It begins to look as if those international friendly gestures have passed the sparring stage. And we can't do a thing until we hear from Tex Guinan, the woman without a country.

BUHL FOUNDATION'S SITE ON MT. WASHINGTON, HIGH ABOVE "THE POINT," FOR COMMUNITY OF MODERN HOMES . . . PLANE LOOKED FROM 1,500 FEET

HILLTOP TRACT OF 45 ACRES PROVIDED

Houses for Workers Will Be Built Among Gardens, Playgrounds and Parks

Plans for the construction of a modern, garden-type residential community, designed ultimately to house, at moderate rentals, 300 families of employes in the golden triangle, were announced today by the Buhl Foundation of Pittsburgh.

Construction will begin next month on a 45-acre site on Mt. Washington within seven minutes of the downtown district by automobile and 14 by street car. The first $1,000,000 unit of the project, to provide homes for 125 families, will be ready for occupancy next May.

Less than 30 per cent of the tract will be occupied by homes, the remainder will be landscaped to provide large central parks, wide lawns and gardens around each dwelling and for playgrounds. All such outdoor facilities are to be maintained permanently by the foundation.

BUILDING PLANS

Plans provide that homes will face toward the central parks. Each building is to be individual in design, but in harmony with all others. Homes will be of five, six or seven rooms with a ground and second floor, built in units of from two to seven houses with sound-proof party walls. Floors are to be hardwood, baths in modern colors with built-in tubs, kitchens equipped with permanent fixtures, including electric refrigeration; finished basement with laundry and an independent heating plant. Many homes will have sun parlors or private garages.

Executives of the foundation say that it is not the purpose to offer the homes for sale, but that permanent rental administration will be maintained. This is expected to assure unusual security to the tenant and an exemplary standard of maintenance and management. Funds of the foundation are to finance the entire project. No bond or stock issues will be floated.

PROFIT EXPECTED

The Buhl Foundation is not entering into the program as a philanthropic enterprise, but it is to be commercially practical, it is stated. Economies that will be possible through mass construction, present low cost of building materials, and the intention to require only a reasonable and non-speculative return on its investment will make lower rental possible.

Decision of the foundation to enter the field is based upon a desire to make its funds do double duty, according to Charles F. Lewis, director of the foundation. He said:

"It was found that through this agency it would be possible to invest money directly for a constructive social purpose, without sacrifice of income and without unusual risk to the invested funds. Normal income will still be available for philanthropic programs of the foundation. Through this housing program capital funds as well as income can be used to the benefit of the citizens of Pittsburgh.

JOBLESS RELIEF

"Entrance into the project under present conditions expresses the confidence of the Buhl Foundation managers in the future of Pittsburgh and of the nation. Their activity, it is hoped, will serve as a precedent for utilizing the present period of low material prices in the launching of projects that may be of large importance locally and helpful in the relief of the unemployment situation.

"The surest indicator of a nation's stability is the widespread building of homes. Homes are a vital basis of our national economy, and their construction is fundamental in building back to normal times. Upon a revival

AWARD $15,770 FOR INJURIES

A verdict of $15,770 damages for injuries to Elizabeth Lang, a minor, was awarded her parents, William and Alice Lang, of Oakland, in their suit against M. A. Hanlon and J. A. Freyvogel, undertakers, in Common Pleas Court.

The girl was in the automobile of her father, driven by him, attending the funeral of a relative June 18, 1927. As the funeral procession halted in Fifth avenue near Brady street, the Lang car was struck in the rear by a funeral car in charge of defendants, conducting the funeral, and crashed against the car in front, causing the girl to be thrown to the floor and to suffer spinal injuries which made her an invalid, according to the allegations.

At a previous trial, Judge Joseph M. Swearingen ordered a compulsory non-suit, which was reversed on appeal to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, which ordered a new trial.

Risks Life Trying To Save Pet Dog

Oscar Cohen, of 826 Mellon street, had a narrow escape last night when he leaped in front of a speeding bus at Stanton avenue and Mellon street in an effort to save his pet bulldog, which ran in front of the machine. Seeing he was unable to reach the dog he jumped back to the curb, the bus missing him by inches. The dog was killed.

Believes World Needs New Type Skates--Makes Them

What the world needs is a new type of ice-skates, Clarence Adams, of 228 Sycamore street, believes. So for the past eight years he has been working on a pair of skates with adjustable blades.

The advantages of adjustable blades, Mr. Adams believes, are threefold. One pair of skates can have any number of blades, hockey, figure or racing; they are adjustable to the stance or balance of weight of the body; when skates need sharpening, the blade can be quickly removed and hand-sharpened with an oil stone.

Adams conceived the idea for adjustable blades when his last pair of skates, for which he paid $13.50, broke the fourth time he wore them. He is a machinist and made his invention with a dollar vise, a couple of old hammers and files and a drill.

He is not interested in making a lot of money from his invention, he said. He believes it will be of value to professional hockey skaters, because if their runners get dull or broken during a game they could, in less than a minute, substitute another blade and proceed with the game.

Teacher Pleads for Space For Small Children In Crowded District

Hill district schools again came into the limelight today with complaints of Miss Mary E. Nolin, principal of the Hancock School, Webster and Seventh avenues, that young children attending her classes are without any form of playground.

Children of kindergarten, first and second grades, attend the Hancock School, with older students who wish to learn English and study Americanization courses.

The younger children, Miss Nolin says, are kept in the building during recess. They have no place where they can play their games, no place to exercise between classes. They are on the edge of the business district. Tall buildings loom on one side, tenements and disorderly houses climb the hill on the other. Miss Nolin said:

"While we are too far downtown to be bothered by open vice, we do need some place to play. Those little children have no place to stretch their limbs. There's just a tiny enclosure in the back, noto big enough for a playground or any useful purpose. And the children want, so badly, to get in there.

"It seems only fair that they be given some place to play."

KERR REFUSES PAY FOR THIN PAVEMENT

Lang's Plan to Reimburse Contractor Under Bond Guaranteeing Job Fails

Controller James P. Kerr has stopped payment of $17,935 to Contractor Dominick Pavia, of 331 Ladson street, for failure to meet city specifications in paving Fifteenth street from Penn avenue to Pike street.

Kerr had tests made of the pavement after the job was completed and the borings showed a lack of the specified thickness. Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, investigated and found that the concrete slab was of proper thickness, but that stratification had permitted the dislodgement of only part of the thickness when taking the test boring.

Lang proposed paying Pavia, providing he posted $4,000 bond guaranteeing the job for five years. Ordinarily a one-year guarantee is required. Kerr declined and wrote Pavia this letter yesterday:

"With reference to the final estimate of the paving of Fifteenth street, I am obliged to inform you that the report from the Bureau of Tests shows that you did not comply with the specifications.

"I therefore cannot permit the payment of the final estimate until the Bureau of Tests furnishes this department with a report showing that the work has been done in accordance with the specifications."

KEEP KISSABLE

. . . WITH OLD GOLDS

OLD GOLDS were created to give you THROAT-EASE . . . as well as a more delightful tasting cigarette. But the makers also considered your breath, your lips, your teeth, as well as your THROAT.

They created a pure-tobacco cigarette . . . free of coriander and other greasy artificial flavorings* that burn into clinging, staining, breath-tainting vapors.

To avoid unpleasant aftermaths, smoke pure-tobacco OLD GOLDS. Their clean, sun-ripened, natural-flavored tobaccos will be like honey to your THROAT. And they leave no objectionable odors either on your breath or clothing, or in the room.

HERE'S THE PROOF*

Open up a pack of OLD GOLDS and smell the tobacco. Do the same with any other cigarette. Judge for yourself which has the natural, pleasant, all-tobacco aroma. It's a favor to your family and friends, as well as to yourself, to smoke NATURAL-FLAVORED, pure-tobacco OLD GOLDS.

Counsel for Fraternity Planning to Fight Rule 'Padlocking' 10 Aeries

Counsel for some of the 10 aeries of the Fraternal Order of Eagles in Western Pennsylvania, including Pittsburgh Aerie No. 76, 431 Third avenue, which were ordered "padlocked" for three months each by Federal Judge Nelson Mc-Vicar, because of violations of the prohibition law on the premises, said that appeals will be made to the United States Circuit Court.

In directing preparation of the injunction decrees the court stipulated that officers of the aeries may reopen the buildings at the expiration of the three months, upon posting bonds against further violations of the dry law.

The 10 Eagle cases were among 54 final hearings in injunction proceeding brought by the prohibition department.

The other aeries "padlocked" were No. 590, Charleroi; 285, McKeesport; 532, Monongahela; 533, New Kensington; 769, Homestead; 778, Johnstown; 494, Dubois; 1468, Indiana, and the Altoona aerie.

The court overruled objections by defense counsel to testimony of prohibition agents who admitted using spurious membership cards in gaining entrance to the Eagle organizations.

An injunction suit against the Loyal Order of Moose No. 57, at 522 Braddock avenue, Braddock, was dismissed because the "nuisance" complained of had been abated before the filing of the injunction. A "padlock" was ordered placed on the saloon and clubrooms of the Clocke Association, first floor, 612 Grant street, Springdale.

OLD LOVE CALLS :-: Popular Movie Comedian Returning to Footlights :-: AMUSEMENT NOTES

Bert Wheeler Says He's Going Back to Stage In January

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Publication Service, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD, June 3.

January is a long while off, but Bert Wheeler says he will not renew his Radio Picture contract at that time.

The comedian, who was a Follies headliner and vaudeville star before he entered the talkies and teamed up with Robert Woolsey, expects to go back to the stage under the auspices of George White. His vehicle will be a musical comedy.

Bert Wheeler

Edmund Lowe

Several things enter into Wheeler's decision. In the first place, he believes with Eddie Cantor that every actor should constantly renew his direct contact with audiences. Then he has an idea if he stays on the screen he may wear out his welcome. The prospect of five pictures in 1932, he says, this is Radio's proposition, fill him with misgivings. With a good deal of logic he argues you can't make five good comedies in a year.

The net result for the moment at least is the proposed vacation from pictures. As to whether he would go through with the idea in the face of a sufficiently handsome offer from R-K-O, your guess is as good as mine.

THEN THE FUN BEGAN

Sam Mintz tells the story of the well-dressed actor who went into a Hollywood restaurant and ordered an expensive dinner. When the last course was finished he sent for the manager.

"How are you?" he asked. "Do you remember the fellow who came in here about two months ago and offered to leave his watch in payment for a dinner. And do you recall you had two burly waiters throw him out instead?

"Well, that fellow was a good friend of mine."

"I'm sorry, sir," apologized the manager. "Sometimes those things are unavoidable. But is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes," sighed the actor. "I'm afraid I'll have to trouble you again."

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With the opening of the box-office sale of seats set for nine ayem tomorrow for Mr. Ziegfeld's quite well known "Follies," Mr. Harry Brown's b. o. boys find themselves making a hasty redistribution of ticks, all because Ziggy put off the world's premiere of his new gal and fun show until Monday, June 15. The premiere date was June 11, until yesterday. The heaviest mail order in the Nixon's history was being attended to on that basis when Flo (we friends always call Ziggy "Flo") called Mr. Brown on the phone and just about raised Old Harry.

Because Thursday is too close to Friday or sump'n' he decided the Monday that marks the middle of June would be a better day for a world's premiere. So the mail order ducat apportionment is being shifted, and those who sent checks for a Thursday show will get pasteboards dated Monday. Mr. Brown asks us to assure readers that the degree of visibility in the Nixon varies only slightly between Thursday and Monday, and that Monday is really a better day, after all, for a world premiere. Thursday, he says, would be great for a state premiere but a world premiere is different—a leetle more techy.

Something

Wanting you always, loving you not at all,
I shall be very careful to lay by Something of ours, some little thing, to call
My own when you have boarded ship or I
Have climbed into a train or taken wing
(It won't be long, I promise!)—to be gone Forever.
May I, my dear?—some little thing
Of yours-and-mine that shall be mine alone?
Some little thing of laughter or of song,
Of waterfront or rain or repartee,
Of running water or of wind along
The road or some divine insanity—
A single mood, a single word will do
Nicely, my dear, since I may not have you . . . .

THE KID KNEW TOO MUCH—

This picture presents for the first time the actual rebellion of a large city against underworld domination! Thrilling beyond words! And in its central role Wallace Beery as "Slaughterhouse" is even better than his famous "Butch" of "The Big House."

How Could They Miss?

What France really gave Miss Guinan was a Great Big—foot.

Tee, Hee

Of course you've heard of the wit who advertised in a "Personal" column:

"Will the man whose wife I ran away with last month please return for her, and all will be forgiven!"

Broadway Love

She dances in one of the Stay-Up-Late madhouses, and she isn't hard to look at—through sun-glasses. But, times being what they are, some of the lads make passes at her. Two of them ankled into the joint the other yawning and got into each other's hair over her.

"I asked her for a date before you came in," pouted one of the wooers.

"But she's my old girl," said the other, "I ought to come first."

"Well," was the retort, "tell you what we'll do. I'll play you a game of pinochle for her—and 10 cents a hundred on the side."

Sotto Voce

Beatrice Mayer: Don Wahn, Kid Kazanova, Young Man of Manhattan are the same feller.

How They Knew

The cartoonists tell of a comrade who once was very popular. He did the strip called "The MacDuffs," and the grind finally drove him mad. He was always ahead of his schedule (the crayon-jugglers usually are eight weeks ahead), but one day he turned in four weeks' work, and all his characters were drawn without noses.

When the syndication boss asked him for an explanation, he shrugged his shoulders and said:

"Oh, I just got tired of drawing noses."

The next week he was committed to an asylum, where within the year he passed away.

As If We Didn't Know

And D. Murray observes that in the old days prizefighting was against the law, and it looks like the heavyweights had just heard about it.

Description

A first-night enthusiast was throwing word-knives in the direction of a certain dramatic critic last night.

"The trouble with that guy," groaned the heckler, "is that he always looks like he is bored with being bored!"

Things That Knock Me Cold

"The professional reviewers, weary with plodding across the quicksands of Broadway, are under the impression that any objection to criticism constitute a plea of unstinted praise."

Veriwell, we give up. What else is it?

Flirtation

Oh, lassie of the circulation floor,
Don't roll those big, brown orbs so carelessly.
I'm certain that it makes the fellers sore
At me!

Oh, fair one, I am smitten so with thee,
I herewith tell the staff that you are sweet.
But don't you really think that you should be Discreet?

Pun-ch Drunk

They were reminiscing about Alexander Woollcott, who was the Critic of His Time before he got too rich and ennui set in. Woollcott's new apartment over at Sutton place was being readied, and he urged his witty comrades to suggest nicknames for it. One of them suggested "This is so Sutton," and another recommended the Alex Woollcottage.

The best of them, although it wasn't accepted, was Alec in Wonderland.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for the simile dictionary: Donald MacMinn: As hard to find as the exclamation point on a typewriter. . . . Life: False as Neptune's beard in a beauty pageant. . . . Roy L. McCardell: Fussy as a military funeral. . . . Roy Halee: His office was as busy as a suntan lamp agency in Harlem, and the opening was postponed as often as "Legs" Diamond's obituary.

LINEUP SHIFT AIDS BUCCOS

NEW LINEUP MERITS FURTHER TRIAL

FOR ONE DAY, at least, the reconstructed Pirate lineup must be said to have brought results. Bill Regan was the hero of the victory over the Braves, the first Tuesday game won by the Bucs this year, by the way, and Fred Bennett's single also was an important factor in the ninth inning rally that broke the long winning streak of the hitherto undefeated Ed Brandt. The two new men in the Buccaneer battle array made five of the home club's 11 hits and scored three of its four runs, which might be called a fair afternoon's work by a couple of substitutes.

Bill Regan

Of course, Regan and Bennett could not be expected to maintain such a gait over a long period, but until they show signs of falling off Manager Ens will be warranted in keeping them right on the job, at least when lefthanders are pitching for the enemy. That applies to the second-base shift in particular. Not only was George Grantham hitting below form, but he was fielding so poorly that his errors caused the loss of several games. Regan's presence in the lineup assures an improved defense.

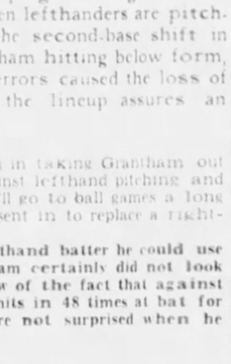
FANS WERE PUZZLED by Ens' action in taking Grantham out of the lineup because the Bucs were up against lefthand pitching and then sending him in as a pinchhitter. You'll go to ball games a long time before you see a lefthand pinchhitter sent in to replace a righthand batter against a southpaw hurler.

It may be argued that Ens had no righthand batter he could use except Thevenow or a pitcher, but Grantham certainly did not look like a good bet under the conditions, in view of the fact that against lefthanders this year he has made only 11 hits in 48 times at bat for an average of .229, and the spectators were not surprised when he struck out.

ONE FEATURE OF the altered lineup that will be watched with interest by the home rooters is its effect upon the hitting of Paul Waner. The older Waner contends that playing first base always hurts his stickwork: that the infield throwing tightens the muscles in his left shoulder and affects his swing.

As far as yesterday's game was concerned Paul had the box score to bear him out, as he went hitless throughout the afternoon. This marks the first time in the 1931 season that he has gone through two games in succession without getting a hit.

THE PIRATES HAVE been poison to pitchers with long winning streaks this season. They stopped Clarence Mitchell, they made Burleigh Grimes retire before the close of a 13-inning battle and came within an ace of beating him, and yesterday they halted the year's leading hurler by handing Ed Brandt his first defeat after he had hung up the season's record of eight wins in a row. Brandt, who has not been relieved in any game this year, beat the Giants three times, the Robins twice and the Pirates Reds and Phillies once each before he went down. He fell two games short of Grimes' achievement in 1929, when Burleigh won his first 10 games of the season for the Pirates. In the same year Tom Zachary won all of his 12 games for the Yankees.



Lefty Grove

PENNANT RIVALS IN the American League, when they wish to cheer themselves up, point out that Connie Mack has only a three-man pitching staff. But Connie should worry. That three-man staff is about equal to a whole league.

Up to today, for instance, the Big Three of Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw and Rube Walberg, with the first-named setting the pace, had turned in by their combined efforts a total of 20 consecutive victories. That comes close to being the best record ever made in a similar period by any three hurlers on any man's ball club.

MEMORY FAILS IF any other modern big league club had three hurlers who pitched regularly for five weeks without losing a game. Grove has won seven in a row and has not been defeated since he lost to the Senators on April 18. Earnshaw also has picked off seven in succession and has not been beaten since he bowed to the Senators on April 24.

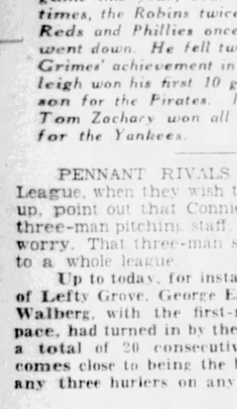
Walberg, since losing to the Yanks on April 30, has been victorious six times straight, not seven, as reported in connecton with his victory yesterday. For the season the three have won 23 games and lost only four. Grove has been particularly brilliant. Up to today not a run has been scored on him in 21 straight innings.

WITH NINE AMERICAN professional entrants among the 109 qualifiers, the United States today appeared to have a good chance to add another successful chapter to the remarkable record that shows Uncle Sam's representatives have captured the British open golf championship nine times in the last 10 years. MacDonald Smith, medalist, with record-breaking qualifying rounds of 70 and 71, has never held a major title. He appeared to have a fine chance to win the British open at Prestwick in 1925, but admiring Scots surged about him and caused him to collapse and to lose to Jim Barnes when he needed only a 78 for victory.

JUDGING FROM THE action of the Florida Senate in overriding Gov. Doyle E. Carlton's veto of the pari-mutuel betting bill that body does not share the Governor's confidence that Miami could attract winter visitors in the usual numbers without winter horse racing.

If the House also overrides the veto, Joseph E. Widener and his associates in the ownership of the Hialeah Park track in Miami will reconsider their decision to abandon winter meetings there. Plans to rebuild the plant at a cost of $750,000 were dropped when the Governor vetoed the betting measure.

THE INCREASING NUMBER of horses entered each year in the Allegheny Country Club horse show has necessitated additional stable room and an enterprising stable committee. Heading this committee for the last four years has been T. McKee Graham, and during that time he has served with H. C. Bughman, Jr., show chairman; H. N. Van Voorhis, W. B. Schiller, W. P. Snyder, Jr., R. K. Mellon and W. C. Robinson, Jr. This year Henry Oliver was added.



T. McKee Graham

Chairman Graham's work has been the supervision of stable additions, the allotment of stall space and a general overseeing of arrivals. With the opening tomorrow of the 1931 show, which is to continue for three days, his duties will end.

THE GRAHAM STABLE, which consists of three horses, spends half the year in Sewickley and half at the family's winter home in Camden, S. C. The horses are exhibited in the southern shows quite often. The W. P. Roth stable, coming from Redwood, Cal., is one of this year's interesting groups. It has been at the club since last week. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Stevenson and their hunt team arrived yesterday from Middleburg, Va. George A. Heyl has come from Washington, Ill., with 18 horses, two of which are owned by Miss Mary Fiers, of Oklahoma City, and five by Emil Phillip, of Milwaukee, Wis. Rolling Rock has 11 entries and Mrs. Simon Patterson will show her hunt team, consisting of Thundercrash, Slim and Prince H, with which she has toured the circuit, ending in considerable glory at Devon last week. Among other things she won the championship in the Corinthian class. Seven horses are coming from Dixiana Farm, Lexington, Ky., the property of Charles C. Fisher.

EPSOM DOWNS, England, June 3.—(AP.)—For the first time in recent years a favorite showed the way home in the English Derby as J. A. Dewar's Cameronian, 7 to 2 choice, scored over 25 other three-year-olds in the one hundred and forty-eighth renewal of the classic here today.

Marshall Field's Jacopo, one of the two American representatives, finished in seventh place. William Woodward's Sir Andrew was far back in the pack as it galloped across the finish line.

CROWD OVER 750,000

With a crowd variously estimated from 750,000 to 1,000,000, including King George and the royal family, looking on, Cameronian, the son of Pharos out of Una Cameron, galloped home over the one and one-half miles, three-quarters of a length in front of Sir John Rutherford's Orpen, the co-second choice. A like distance back in third place trailed Lord Rosebery's Sandwich, another one of the more highly favored.

The race was worth about $60,000 to the winner, while $20,000-000 were distributed through the Irish sweepstakes and smaller sweeps. This year's renewal of the turf's oldest race was generally said to be the biggest "money race" of racing history.

Cameronian was clocked in the good time of 2:36 3-5 for the grueling mile and one-half up and down hill journey. With Freddy Fox in the pilot seat, the Dewar colt kept close to the pace throughout the journey and once he started running in the stretch he was not to be beaten.

BATTLE DOWN STRETCH

Sir Andrew crossed the finish line in twentieth position, never being a serious factor in the race. Jacopo, however, finished behind Pomme D'Api, carrying the silks of the Aga Khan, and Sir Edward Hanmer's Gallant, as they battled down the stretch in fifth place.

The victory of Cameronian was a popular one, as the Dewar ace has occupied the position of the favorite since winning the classic Two Thousand Guineas. As near post time as this morning he was being quoted at 4 to 1 but the huge crowd, remembering the long line of triumphs by outsiders, began to plunge on the long shots with the result that the odds on Cameronian shortened to 7 to 2 by the time he faced the barrier. Orpen was held at 9 to 1 and Sandwich at 8 to 1.

King George looked on from his box with Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, Princess Mary and other members of the family.

KING LOOKS ON

Before leaving for the race, the King spent some busy hours receiving hundreds of messages of congratulatins on his birthday anniversary from many parts of the world. His relatives telephoned and called personally to convey their greetings. He received gifts from his children and grandchildren.

The crowd cheered as the royal party arrived at the track. The King wore a silk hat with a white carnation in the lapel of his frock coat. Queen Mary wore a toque of powder blue with a coat of light gray.

TOMORROW—THE MATCH THAT WILL LIGHT 600 TIMES.

COURT CONFAB ON TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER

The board of directors of the Tri-State Association for the Selection of Basketball Officials will get into its formal huddle this evening at the P. A. A. Clarence (Buddy) Overend, president of the organization, will be on hand to crack the whip. So will M. R. Glover, of Beaver Falls, the gent who has been selected as commissioner, and who has drawn the tough job of selecting the officials for next year.

Those due to sit in on tonight's conference include Harry Adam Stansbury, of West Virginia; Robert Methuselah Thorn, of Grove City; A. C. Edgecomb, of Geneva; W. Don Harrison, of Pitt, also commissioner of an association of like complexion for the selection of football officials, and M. R. Way, of Allegheny.

At tonight's confab, the schedules of the members of the association will be taken up and turned over to Commissioner Glover, who will have the grief of parceling out whistle tooters for next winter's games. It looks like a nice hot summer for Brother Glover.

The Tipoff

Unless Geneva sends its two Negro stars, Spencer, the hurdler and Thomas, the sprinter, and West Virginia decides to buy choo-choo tickets for Hill, Fraser and Calloway, the tri-state district will be represented only by Tech's two entries, Coulter and Norris, in the N. C. A. A. meet in Chicago this weekend. Pitt isn't going to send Everett Utterback, who still is nursing a bum heel.

For the second year in a row, Columbia University is to have a Pittsburgh boy as baseball captain. John Bulquist, who starred on the Schenley High nines of 1926, '27 and '28, was elected unanimously to lead the '32 Lion nine yesterday. He succeeds Eddie Obey, another local lad.

Cermak, Simmons To Attend Bouts At Yukon, Pa.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 3.—Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, and Al Simmons, outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, will attend an amateur boxing show to be held at Yukon, near here, next Monday night.

Mayor Cermak and party, now in Atlantic City, have written the Rev. W. J. Osinski, pastor of the Seven Dolores Church, of Yukon, that they will visit him Monday, while Simmons, a former college mate, will occupy a ringside seat.

COLTS CAPTURE ANOTHER

Cumberland's rampaging Colts maintained their two-and-one-half-game lead in the Middle Atlantic League over Clarksburg yesterday by defeating Wheeling, 12 to 5, for their fourth consecutive victory. The Colts won with seven runs to spare, although they were outhit, 10 to 9.

Clarksburg defeated Beckley, 8 to 4, in a free-hitting game, each nine getting 14 safe blows.

Charleston was outhit by Johnstown, nine to four, but defeated the Johnnies 2 to 1, in another freak game. Scottdale defeated Fairmont, 7 to 4, in a game in which each club secured 10 safe blows, and Huntington walloped Altoona, 9 to 2.

In the remaining game, Hagerstown defeated Charleroi, 5 to 1.

Aussies Offer Tilden $16,500 for Tour

MELBOURNE, June 3.—(AP.)—The sum of £3,500 (about $16,500) has been granted Big Bill Tilden and his associates in a proposed tour of Australia by the Australian Lawn Tennis Association. If Tilden comes alone he would be guaranteed £2,500 (about $11,500).

WOMEN IN CLUB PLAY TODAY

Three women's club matches are on the books in golf for today. A flag tournament, under full handicap, is slated at the Alcoma Country Club, medal play, under full handicap, will be held at Valley Heights, while two-ball foursomes are to be staged at Chartiers Heights.

Tomorrow the inaugural championship of the Interscholastic Golf Conference will be decided over the links of the Alcoma Country Club, and to either McKeesport High, victor in Section II, or Kiski Prep, winner in Section I, will go the Mrs. C. E. Lott Cup, emblematic of the league title. The victor will hold the cup for only a year, for permanent possession can be obtained only by winning it thrice. Capt. W. A. Palmer, of Shady Side Academy, secretary of the I. G. C., will be on hand to direct play.

Yesterday, Shady Side won the right to meet the loser of tomorrow's match for the runner-up honors in the conference by defeating the Taylor Allderdice team, 15 to 10, on the Schenley municipal layout.

R. G. Monroe won the Pittsburgh Butter and Egg Exchange tournament at the Valley Heights Country Club yesterday with a low gross of 85. W. G. Yost and J. H. Gaston shared prizes in the kickers' handicap with their net 75s. George J. Henderson recorded low net, with 91-18—73.

Dr. W. W. King, former captain of the University of Pittsburgh golf team, scored an ace at the Latrobe Country Club recently. He registered a one-spot on the 133-yard No. 2 hole.

The elimination round for the 16 teams that will battle for the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association championship this year will be held July 8, the matches to be split among Fox Chapel, Oakmont, Field Club and South Hills.

Longue Vue is in the competition this year, supplanting New Castle. Pairings for the eliminations will be announced soon by George Ormiston, secretary of the W. P. G. A.

Edgar Kaufmann Enters Horses In 'Chases

Pittsburgh, through Edgar J. Kaufmann, is to have representation in the North Shore and Lake Forest steeplechases, to be run at Arlington Park, near Chicago, in July. Kaufmann has entered the following horses in the Arlington Park 'chases:

Nopal, a 6-year-old stallion by Bay Cherry from Flowers; Sardanza, a 6-year-old gelding by Sardanaple from Lespedeza; Libertin a 5-year-old stallion by Collaborator from Lipa; Acrobat II, a 5-year-old gelding by Chulu from Nice Time.

Nopal also has been named for the Arlington Cup and the Arlington Handicap, flat races of one and one quarter miles for 3-year-olds and over, worth $30,000 and $40,000 respectively.

PIMLICO DROPS $10,000 RACE

BALTIMORE, June 3.—(AP.)—The $10,000 Pimlico cup handicap has been eliminated from the schedule of events for the fall meeting at Pimlico, the Maryland Jockey Club, operator of the track, has announced.

Elimination of the stake, one of the richest of the fall meeting since its inception in 1919, was a continuation of the economy policy started with the spring meeting.

BY CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The complexion of the Pirates was changed a bit today just because a couple of old-fashioned right-hand hitters came out of dugout obscurity to tee off on the best of a crop of southpaws which has been worse than the bubonic plague to the Pirates. For weeks upon weeks, rival pilots have been sending out their sidewheelers to heckle the southpaw attack of the Freebooters and these pitchers have unmercifully cut us down.

The situation became acute yesterday when Skipper Bill McKechnie put Eddie Brandt upon Fogarty Knoll in the first appearance of the Braves in Pittsburgh. Brandt owned eight unbroken successes but when he stepped out to warm up, Boss Ens assigned Gus Suhr and George Grantham to reserved seats on the Pirate bench and Fred Bennett, new outfielder, and Bill Regan, native son, went into action.

REGAN HITS HARD

Regan proved the big hero of a winning battle waged by the Buccos. Oakland Bill drove in the victory tally with two out in the ninth, his three pretty hits leading the attack of the Ensmen as they won, 4 to 3.

So there was more animation in the Pittsburgh camp today as the Buccos prepared for the second game of the series. Manager Ens will call upon Larry French or Ervin Brame to face the Tribe. Skipper McKechnie may send Ben Cantwell, slender righthander, to the mound.

The home club's batting front was slow to get started in the first game, but when the new combination began to click, there was much excitement. Paul Waner left his rightfield role to come in to play first base while Bennett took Paul's role in the pasture. The latter played fine ball, made two hits and scored the winning run.

Regan really was the pivot of the best triumph the Pirates have gained on the home lot this season. Bill came up in the ninth while the excitement was at its height. Adam Comorosky had just scored L. Waner with the tieing run and Bennett was on third and Traynor on first with two outs.

BRANDT STOPPED

Brandt appeared to be a bit nervous at this stage of the fight. The long winning streak had been

TFARRELL SHARES LEAD IN BRITISH OPEN

TARMOUR, GENE SARAZEN BAG LOW SCORES

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland, June 3.—Johnny Farrell, smiling young Irishman from Mamaroneck, N. Y., putted brilliantly to score a 72, even par, and share the lead with Henry Cotton and W. T. (Billy) Twine, English professionals, in the first round of the British open golf tournament here today.

Grouped among the leaders were seven of the eight other American professionals in the tournament. Tommy Armour came in with a 73 to take second place behind the leaders, and Gene Sarazen, with 74, shared the third position with Alliss, Oke, Large and Lacey, British stars. Farrell, Armour and Sarazen are former U. S. open champions.

MAC SMITH SLUMPS

MacDonald Smith, who led the qualifying field of 109 with two brilliant rounds of 70, 71, lapsed just enough today to pull him down to 75. Joe Kirkwood, American trick shot artist, also carded a 75 to share fourth place with Smith, Tomasco Genta, leader of the Argentine delegation, and several Britons.

Willie Hunter was in a threatening position with a 76, and Joe Turnesa and Horton Smith were only a stroke back with 77 each.

Tony Manero was the only American "out in the cold." He encountered all kinds of trouble and rang up an 82.

Playing through a strong wind, now at his back, now dead ahead, again blowing across the fairway, Farrell went out in a par-cracking 33 and staggered home in 39, a garrison finish on the last three holes giving him his score.

It was black magic, the natives whispered, what Johnny did with his putter on that outward swing. Of the nine holes seven were scored with one put.

When word of his record-breaking nine came to the clubhouse hundreds of persons dashed out across the burns and fairways to escort him home.

He played easily and unhurriedly across the tricky traps and burns and was never in serious trouble.

SCORING IS HIGH

As the day wore on and the headliners began to come in the American scores looked better.

Charles Whitcombe, captain of the British Ryder Cup team, could do no better than a 80; Abe Mitchell took a 77 and Rufus Stewart and Eric McRuvie 76s.

Arthur Havers, the winner in 1923, posted a 75, Aubrey Boomer took a 76, Ted Ray a 79, Rex Hartley an 80, and Archie Compston, a 77.

MacDonald Smith, U. S. A.	75

SKIBOS, IRISH SIGN PACT

Pittsburgh football fans are assured of seeing the Notre Dame eleven in action here as late as 1935.

Jess Harper, new director of athletics at Notre Dame, visiting Clarence Overend, graduate manager at Carnegie Tech, yesterday confirmed a five-year agreement between his university and the local institution.

The game during the coming season will be played here on October 31. The 1932 contest will find the Tartans in South Bend on October 22. Notre Dame is to return to Pittsburgh to meet the Skibos in 1933, and Harper and Overend yesterday decided to set the '33 date early next week.

Continuing the alternating games at home and abroad, Carnegie will go to South Bend in 1934, and the Irish will return to Pittsburgh in 1935, all this to take place under the agreement that was confirmed yesterday.

"We consider Carnegie Tech a traditional rival," Director Harper said, "and we certainly want to continue indefinitely a relationship in football that extends back to 1923."

Negotiations also were begun between Notre Dame and Carnegie for basketball and track competition.

There is little chance that basketball games will be arranged for next season, since Carnegie already has announced the longest and hardest card in its history, but there is a strong likelihood that a dual track meet will be scheduled for next spring, probably at South Bend.

Harper also inspected Shady Side Academy yesterday as a possible location for keeping the Notre Dame squad when it comes to Pittsburgh next fall.

SHADY SIDE WINS

Shady Side Academy defeated the Duquesne Prep nine on the Academy diamond yesterday by a score of 11 to 8.

(Baseball's Comedian)

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Folks sometimes ask me what ball players do on rainy days. Well, if they are playing for the Red Sox or Cincinnati clubs they call a rainy day a nice act of Providence. That's one day they can't lose a game, even if they don't improve their average. So they figure it is just like splitting a doubleheader. Personally, I know enough to stay in out of the rain on stormy days because once I got caught in a shower wearing a $15 suit and almost got strangled under the shoulders. But when a game is called off these days most players go to the movies and wonder how many more seasons Marlene Dietrich's legs will hold out.

TENNIS CHAMP TO RETURN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Bill Haseltine, Quaker City dark-horse, who last year thumbed his way across the state to Pittsburgh and galloped off with the Western Pennsylvania men's singles net title and the David I. McCahill trophy, will return this month to defend his crown in action at the Stanton Heights Golf Club when the racquet clans assemble on the Black street lot for the forty-third annual West Penn net conclave, beginning on Saturday, June 20. Information to the above effect is contained in a letter to local relatives of the slender Philadelphian.

Haseltine, a steady and accurate performer, with a fine backhand, a sound barrier game, and a remarkable court sense, was ranked thirteenth in the Middle States section of the U. S. L. T. A. in 1931 and rated two notches higher in the Philadelphia district list for the same period. Besides his West Penn success last year, he captured top honors of the Lansdowne tournament, attained the semi-finals of the Lehigh Valley competition in which he was elimnated in three sets by the brilliant Sam Gilpin, and reached the bracket of eight in the Eastern States titular jousting ere dropping a fast fracas to Plymire.

The most signal recent triumph of Haseltine was at the expense of G. Carlton Shafer, former national indoor doubles champion, whom he accounted for in straight sets in the third round of the Philadelphia and district milling at the Cynwyd Club a fortnight ago.

LIFERS SUFFER SECOND LOSS

The Reliance Life nine dropped its second game in as many starts last evening when the Homestead Grays, recovering from their setback the evening before at the hands of Homewood, defeated the Lifers, 10 to 4. Reliance lost to Swissvale Monday in a West Penn League game.

In the City League, the North Side Civics nosed out the J. L. Thomas nine, 8 to 7, and Homewood added further to the woes of the Buicks by landing an 8-to-4 victory.

A no-hit, no-run game was turned in by Pitcher Frank Muskum, of the Mallin Jewelers in the North Side Twilight League when he blanked the West End Eagles, 18 to 0.

TOM CONNOLLY UMP CHIEF

CHICAGO, June 3.—(AP.)—Within less than a week of his elevation to the American League presidency, William Harridge has acted to halt complaints on umpiring by appointing Thomas H. Connolly chief of staff of the arbiters.

Connolly, dean of the league's umpires, will assume his new duties after officiating in a game at Boston, June 17. He will make his headquarters here and will act as supervisor of umpires. He also will scout the minor leagues for umpiring material and act in an advisory capacity to President Harridge regarding playing rules.

PUBLIC LINKS TEST JULY 7

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Kenneth C. Witherow, local member of the United States Golf Association public links committee, has announced that a 36-hole qualifying test for the national public links championship will be played at the Schenley Park municipal links on Tuesday, July 7.

The purpose will be to qualify a team for the trip to St. Paul, Minn., August 4 to 8.

Inasmuch as the local commissioner has the option this year of either selecting or qualifying a team, or both, Witherow has taken a most commendable step in declaring Carl Kauffmann, four-time winner of the national gonfalon, exempt from the qualifying round—and, to be sure, Carl will be out at St. Paul doing his stuff as usual.

It is possible that the other three members of the team, making four in all, also will be selected, although the number of players who will make the trip depends entirely upon the funds available.

Following the 36-hole test, if Witherow decides it is necessary, an additional 18 holes or more may be exacted from the 20 low scorers. An entrance fee of $1 is to be charged, and entries close with Witherow on Saturday, June 20.

This year, if the water is as rough as it has been for the past two regattas, the races will be postponed until the following day, June 17.

In 1929 four crews swamped and last year Navy went down before the finish was reached.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

American Open, British Open, American Amateur and Former British Amateur Champion

Certainly the British amateur championship just concluded at Westward Ho! lived up to its reputation for furnishing more surprising matches than any other tournament in the world. Favorites fell right and left after the first few rounds, until there was scarcely a man left in the quarter-finals who had ever advanced that far before.

Bobby Jones

And with all respect to the two finalists, I doubt if any one, including themselves, ever seriously considered at the beginning of the week, the possibility of their advancing so far.

But I do not agree with the seemingly general view that the defeat of George Voigt by Syd Roper was entitled to be considered an upset. I found out at St. Andrews last year that Roper is a man who has enough ability to beat anyone, especially with his splendid competitive temperament. A good bit has been said, since Roper beat Voigt, about my encounter with the former young man at St. Andrews last year, but there are a few details which have not appeared. These others indicate in a way, why the favorites in the British amateur are so likely to run into so-called surprising upsets.

ROPER REAL STAR

After the draw was announced last year, as it always is, several days before the tournament, I was asked a good many times who my first-round opponent was to be. When I would reply "Syd Roper," the comment was always, "Roper? Oh, yes. You don't need to worry about him. He'll probably be about even fives." Either that or "I don't know him." Yet when Roper hit his first tee shot at St. Andrews I knew he could play golf, and most likely would.

To be brief, I started 3, 4, 3, 2 against par of 4, 4, 4, 4 having holed a shot of 140 yards from the cottage bunker at the fourth. Against almost anyone, the match would have been settled then and there, and I must say that I expected it to be so in this case. Roper had played the first four holes each in exact par and lost three of them. Yet on the fifth, a hole of over 500 yards, where the wind was a bit following, after a long straight drive he cracked an iron shot 10 feet past the flag and almost holed a 3. Instead of folding up, he kept on shooting 4s, and pretty soon he got back one hole and then another. In spite of my start I had a real battle on my hands to win, 3 and 2.

18-HOLE MATCHES SCORED

His play against Voigt was typical. Two down at the turn, he calmly proceeded to come home serenely in 36 to nose George out on the last green.

I don't know yet how to regard 18-hole matches in a championship. Certainly if the tournament is intended to produce the best golfer as champion, 18-hole matches defeat that aim. On the other hand, if it is intended only to be a pleasant week of golf to provide fun for the players, and excitement and thrilling finishes to watch and read about, then 18-hole matches are ideal. Somehow I have never been able to treat championships that lightly. They are not like invitation tournaments, and I don't think they ought to be.

BRANDT LOSES TO PIRATES

taking its toll and Regan did not wait long to nick him for the winning hit. Eddie served Bill a curve ball on the inside of the plate. Regan pulled the ball between Maranville and Hunnefield like a shot. The Rabbit had the jump on the rocket and for a brief moment the Pirates and fans feared he would get his hand on the ball which might have meant a force play.

Remy Kremer, one of the hard luck pitchers of the season, was taken out of the game just 'n time to lose credit for the subsequent success. Kremer was yanked in the eighth with the tying run on third and two out. Bob Osborn worked the ninth round and received the laurel denoting success. George Grantham batted for Kremer and he was about a 10-to-1 shot against the southpaw slants of Brandt.

The fans wondered why Grantham, who is weak against left-handers, was sent to the plate in this crisis. It was a rather strange move, yet Skipper Ens had no right-hand batters aside from the recruit players and he apparently figured that Grantham would have a better chance to cope with Brandt than the youngsters.

IGNACIO ARA STARS IN K. O. ROLE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Age 21; weight 152 pounds; height 5 feet 9 inches; nationality, Spanish began ring career in 1927.

That's what the record book says about Ignacio Ara, the opponent of Buck McTiernan in the Swissvale stars New York debut in the 10-round semi-final to a Ben Jeby-Vince Dundee middleweight elimination bout in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Bad news comes from the East about this fellow Ara. Men who have seen him in action describe him as a dangerous puncher. He has knocked out almost half of his opponents in something like 50 bouts. He began boxing in his native country and then went to Finland and from there arrived in New York in 1929. After four bouts there he went to Cuba and piled up a list of wins before going to Mexico City, back to Cuba and thence returning to New York the latter part of last year.

HAS GOOD RECORD

He has beaten Tommy White, former claimant of the Mexican welterweight title; Relampago Saguero, the Cuban, who boxes Jackie Fields, former world welterweight champion, in Chicago next week; Canada Lee, Sergt. Sammy Baker and Izzy Grove and knocked out Pinky Kaufman.

He must be a good fighter to rate a semi-final spot in the Garden, and perhaps the storm signals wafted McTiernan's way are justified, but Buck has gained the notion in the last year or so that he himself is fairly adept with the padded mittens and he left here full of confidence in his ability to win in his first start in the Big Town.

Between Rounds

Eddie Brannon, local Negro lightweight, meets Harry Devine, of Worcester, Mass., in the main event of a double-windup card at Erie, Friday night. Larry Madar, of Cleveland, and Eddie Williams, of Worcester, are in the other 10-rounder.

K. O. Kelly boxes Jose Walters, Negro star, of Springfield, O., in the main bout of a show at Franklin, Pa., next Monday night. Tiger West and Billy Bruns are in another feature event.

Carl Cesko, of Uniontown, will box Anson Green, of Homestead, in the opening preliminary to the Paulo Joe Gans-Eddie Brady bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, next Monday night. The windup will mark the second appearance of Baby Joe in these parts. He gave Rudy Cedar a drubbing at Bridgeville, summer before last, and last year stopped Young Saylor at the Meyers Bowl. Brady repeated a previous victory over Cuddely DeMarco in his only showing here several years ago, at Motor Square Garden.

Eddie Anderson will conclude his training at the Pittsburgh Lyceum today for his 10-round return bout with Tony Herrera at Hickey Park, Millvale, tomorrow night. The club reports a good advance sale for the show and expects an even larger crowd than the one which saw Battling Gray and Eddie Brannon in action there last Thursday night.

Harry Fierro, of Chicago, and Mose Butch, of Oakland bantams, boxing the semi-final will back the Sammy Dorfman-Battling Gray bout at the Meyers Bowl one week from next Monday night.

Frankie Genaro will get 37½ per cent for his bout with Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, at Hickey Park, Millvale, Thursday night of next week, although he will not be defending his disputed claim to the flyweight title, the match being made at 117 pounds.

A movement is under way to match Emmett Rocco, of Elwood City, and Johnny Bisko, of Cleveland, who have met twice so far, with honors even, for the semi-final to the Young Stribling-Max Schmeling title fight in Cleveland, July 3.

George Parks, erstwhile Homestead heavyweight now fighting out of Cleveland, boxes Chuck Richards in the semi-final to the K. O. Chesterfield-Mc Fowler bout at Johnstown, June 16.

SCHOOL NINES PLAY TO TIE

The schoolboy nines of Schenley and South Hills, tussling in the first game of the series for the City League championship, battled to a 10-inning deadlock last evening at Forbes Field, the score being 2-2 when darkness forced a halt being called in the proceedings. Now they'll start all over again Friday.

Schenley, defending its league title and representing Section 1, rushed two runs over in the second inning on Mihm's walk, Qualley's double and Lentz's wild throw over second. South Hills tied the score in the third when Metz and Reinheimer were both walked and Firrell tripled to deep left. Firrell tried to stretch his hit into a homer, but was nabbed at the plate.

From that point on, the two hurlers, Stratton, of Schenley, and Lentz, of South Hills, staged a fine duel. Stratton fanned 15 batters and gave up but four hits, while Lentz forced 17 to strike out and gave up five hits.

South Hills' best chance to score after the third came in the eighth when, with two out and two men on base, Regan fanned. The score:

GARDEN SERVED TWO EDICTS

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP.)—The New York State Athletic Commission has informed the Madison Square Garden Corporation that unless the erection of a wooden track in the Garden for the summer months was approved by Fire and Building Commissioners all fight shows scheduled indoors there must be canceled.

The ruling may cause cancellation of the Ben Jeby-Vince Dundee middleweight match tomorrow night.

The Garden had planned to stage bicycle races indoors, as well as boxing matches featuring new talent during the warm months. The Garden also was warned that Roberti Roberto, Italian heavyweight, would not be permitted to fight Victorio Campolo there June 11, because of a prior engagement in Newark, June 9.

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, was given until June 20 to sign for a title defense.

VEECK DENIES TRADE

CHICAGO, June 3.—William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, again has denied reports that Hack Wilson, slugging outfielder of the team, will be traded.

GREATER PITTSBURGH LEAGUE
Edgewood at Iroquois.

By TOM BIRKS

A full list of promising games is carded for local sandlotters this evening. The West Penn loop features the Marty Griffin club opposing Linwood at the Schenley High School field.

The Griffins have been getting bad breaks. Manager Hugo Pasquerelli has announced that Gettings will pitch this evening and the team hopes to win back of him.

One game will be staged in the City League. Dormont hooks up with the North Side Buicks at the South Hills. The Dunsky team should pack in a crowd. Carroll will probably oppose Wood on the slab.

CARDS MEET OAKLANDERS

In the Steel City League, a battle for the leadership is carded as the East End Cardinals meet the De Pasquale club of Oakland. The Cards are going along at a sensational clip, having won five in a row.

The other game finds Mifflin meeting the Brodericks at Marshall Field. Mifflin is having a tough time getting started.

In the Commercial and Industrial loop, Sam Craig will take the Joseph Horne nine to Library to hook-up with the Coalers. Hornes are going along at a fine pace, and probably will make the clubs hustle in the second half, when all of the games are played at Camp Horne.

LIFERS FACE TEST

Reliance Life, which suffered a setback in the West Penn League Monday, will get tough opposition at Burgwin Field when Frank Rush throws his Railroaders at the Insurance boys. Miller is looking for a tougher fight in the Commercial and Industrial than the West Penn. B. & O. may cause another surprise.

A big battle will be on at Latrobe when the Derry Independents hook-up with Snydertown. The Independents, with Bucci showing fine form, are very much in the race for the Wagner trophy.

Many of the Derry boys are well known in Pittsburgh through their football ability. Bucci, Watkins, and others having played here.

The SPEED WAGON frame is longer, stronger, heavy channeled, 7" deep. The axles are heavier—the rear axle full floating. Reo brakes are internal expanding oversize hydraulics!

This overwhelming truck value cannot be matched. Ride and drive the new SPEED WAGONS today. Test them as you will. They are unequalled for combined speed, power, strength, economy, safety and long life.

Tonic for Conceited Girls Is to Help Others

Bored? Fed up with Life on Your Street?

Sure that if you could just go to China or Africa—where people are different and worth your while—you could find happiness?

Then listen while Lucille broadcasts...And maybe you'll recognize your own symptoms.

"Dear Sally:

"I am a steady reader of your column and I think you're great. Why? Because you are frank and tell the truth!

"I am 18, good looking, and have sense and use it. I can talk and get along with anyone. I dance, sing, play the piano and the uke, read, embroider, draw, write stories and poems, have a stamp collection and go in for all sorts of sports.

NOT HAPPY

"My parents are wonderful ...do everything for me, have told me about life, and I don't have to be afraid to ask them anything. I have friends galore and, believe it or not, I don't think I have an enemy.

"This letter sounds like I am throwing flowers at myself. But I'm not. I don't want you, or The Gang, to think that. There are five fellows that I go with, and have known from one year up to five, who would marry me tomorrow if I said 'yes.' But not yet! I want to marry and have babies and a home, but I have brains enough to look at other things besides love . . . rather, I know that my fun must come now.

"Everyone takes me to be older than 18; not in looks, but in speech and my ideas of human nature, which I think I understand more than the average girl of 18, because I have really studied people.

"Yet, with everything, comes the same old whine, 'I'm not happy.' Some will say it's because I'm not in love. Phooey! I was in love for three years, yes, even engaged, but the longer you live, the more you learn, and I found the Boy Friend couldn't talk as intelligently as he should, so we broke up, but we're still friends.

IS CONCEITED

"I want to travel. I crave adventure, and would go to any length to get it. Mother can't understand me. One day I said I would like to spend a week in jail just to see what it was like, and she almost had a fit.

"The other day I read an ad about a position on an ocean liner in Europe. That sure made a hit with me. Now, I wonder if you think it wise to get such a job, or if you know anything about it.

"I guess you wonder why I don't ask mother. Well, I could, but her answer would be 'no'; she wouldn't want me to leave home and, besides, I want a stranger's idea.

"This letter sounds conceited, I'll admit, but it is all true. Now I want to know if the reason I'm not happy is that I have things too easy? I don't think I will ever be really happy, anyway, because I am the kind of person who looks into everything and, to tell the truth, I believe the only time a person is really happy is in moments of 'illusion.'

"LUCILLE."

Conceited, my dear? Yep! And what a lot you have to learn! You may have studied other people, but you have a very limited knowledge of yourself . . . and a very inflated opinion.

The truth is, it isn't adventure you need so much as an escape from boredom. And you actually aren't bored with other people, sister. You are bored with Lucille! And why not? You are going 'round and 'round, inside of her—solely occupied with what she thinks and what she does . . . and how she affects others.

SHOULD HELP OTHERS

"I want to live!" you cry. Of course, you do. But you can't "live" by existing in yourself. To be happy, you must live in other lives. You must go out to other people in friendliness and understanding. You must lose yourself in them. If you truly understand other people, you would find plenty of adventure.....in every person you met. There is more adventure in probing one human soul than in the darkest spot in Africa.

You "want to get away," you say. The truth is you want to run away.....from what? Is it really from Life As Is..... or only from your own one-sided notion of Life? Are you "unhappy because you see too clearly" .....or because you don't see clearly enough to see the beauties as well as the scars? For there are beauties .....all about you....if you'll forget Lucille long enough to look for them. And they're by no means "illusions."

Stop thinking about yourself so much, and begin to think about others.....how to make them happy.....how to serve them.....how to make them say, "What a wonderful person Lucille makes me feel I am!" When you have done that, you'll find life sparkling all about you. You will find adventure just around the corner. And you will no longer be bored....with Lucille.

It Takes Real Test to Prove a Man to Be What He Really Is, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

It is very hard to judge any person rightly.

We know him best for what he seems to be. Yet he may seem better or worse than he really is.

His own opinion of himself may even be wrong. He thinks that he is what he believes himself to be, which may be quite different from what he wishes to seem.

But it takes a real test to prove a man to be what he really is. When faced by a great problem, a crisis, or a temptation, a man is often surprised at his own great strength—or weakness.

That is why we are sometimes disappointed in our high opinions, and at other times happily surprised in the character of those we had underestimated.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

"Merry Christmas!"—and the Mistletoe Chase Begins

It was only for a second that I had an opportunity to speculate upon the meaning of Philip Veritzen's look at his son. As the last strains of "Holy Night" fell from the lips of the young people, the clock upon the mantel chimed midnight, and the next minute or two there were excited exchanges of "Merry Christmas!"

"There! I've said it to everybody, even to the cat, dog, canary and goldfish," the irrepressible Jerry announced, emerging from the group with his hand clasped firmly upon Peggy's slender wrist. "Come on, Woman. "You're goin' to get kissed under the mistletoe! That's the next thing on the program, I know, for Mrs. Graham has it hanging from every chandelier in the house and she must have meant it to be used."

He grinned audaciously at me, and the next instant was dashing in pursuit of Peggy, who had wrenched her wrist free, and was running away. But she had sent a laughing, provocative look over her shoulder at him as she ran, and I had no doubt of Jerry's ultimate success.

"The library is a nice, secluded spot," Harry Underwood said with a grin, but I think no one of the younger group heard him. The girls with the boys in pursuit, were out of the room before he had finished, and we heard them scampering through the halls.

"Flaming Youth!" Harry Underwood chuckled, and I think our faces all reflected the grin on his, for anything more naive and youthful, and blessedly inexperienced than this mistletoe chase, one could not hope to see. I know that many of their mates would laugh at these youngsters for their naturalness their simplicity, their ability to enjoy pleasures which would be damned by their more sophisticated comrades as "stuffy" and "old-fashioned." But I also know and thank God for the knowledge that despite the noise made by the more "advanced" youngsters of today and the publicity given them, there remain just as many decent, natural, home-loving boys and girls in the country—as there are wise, loving parents behind them. I may be mistaken, but is my theory backed by observation, that the wild, carousing boy or girl of today—or of all time—comes from one of two classes of parents—the night-club types who look on a home as a storage place for luggage, and the martinets who drive their children to rebellion against all standards by the sterness and rigidity of their archaic ideas.

"Is that mistletoe I see above me?" Mr. Underwood parodied, striding to the nearest chandelier, and posing ludicrously beneath it. "'Its berries toward my lips?' If so, Santa Claus, I here, la-dees! Line forms to the right, please—and don't crowd."

"Sorry, old dear," his wife laughed, as, at a whispered word from me, she hurried, with me, toward the kitchen. "'Can't get away, to kiss you today,' the coffee pot is calling me. But good hunting!"

Her husband took three strides from the place he had selected, and, pausing at my mother-in-law's chair, he grasped her hands, and pulled her along with him to a position beneath the mistletoe. Then he bent and gravely saluted her with a kiss, which, to my amazement, she accepted smilingly. Lillian and I wasted no seconds in indulging our amused surprise, for fear she might catch us looking at her, but once safely in the kitchen, Lillian clutched a chair-back and bent double with laughter.

"Harry, the lion tamer," she said, and jumped perceptibly as her laugh was echoed from the dining room door—we had come through the hall.

"Ha, ha!" Katie gurgled—I had seen to it that she and Jim listened to the second carol singing as well as the first. "Me—I nefer saw anyting so foony as dot in all my whole life. Dot old vomans she keech out her heel and grin ven she get kissed, shoost as eef she vos seexteen. Und any oder times she bite anybody's head off who get fresh leedle bit. Dis Christmas Eve beezeness great stuff."

"It surely is," I responded, chokingly, and with meaning for Lillian by a pinching clasp of my arm as she indicated the table of goodies Katie had so painstakingly prepared for our midnight lunch, had prevented me from summarily reproving my unconsciously impertinent little maid.

"This layout is great stuff, Katie," Lillian said, and my little maid beamed.

"I tink maybe eferybody hoongry," she said.

"You thought correctly," Lillian informed her. "Madge, may I offer a word of advice? Don't let those crazy youngsters scatter all over the house with this food. Make them all eat in the dining room. They can come and get it from here, but tell 'em they can't go one step beyond the dining room door."

"Yours for preparedness," I answered, smiling, and she moved toward the door.

"I see you're all ready, Katie," she said, "so I'll start the procession moving. I'm going to see that it keeps moving, too, out into the night. Otherwise there'll be no rest for the chatelaine of the farmhouse tonight."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Becoming a Guest Graciously

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A few days ago I met a girl acquaintance on the street. Her mother and father were with her. I had just been introduced to them all. As I was on my way to the movies and they were going, too, they asked me to join them, and naturally the girl's father got the tickets.

Now, what I want to know is whether or not I did right by giving him the money, as I got out of their car when I reached home? Perhaps I imagined it, but I believed I received some rather "surprised" looks. Perhaps I should not have given him the money and tried to repay in some way. But I don't see how I ever could.

Please help me with this as I quite often have wished to know how to straighten out such matters. PUZZLED.

I wouldn't worry unduly about what you did, if I were you, but in the future I believe it would be best for you to take even such a casual invitation as an invitation, and, as part of the invitation in a case like this, there would be taken for granted the buying of your ticket by the man of the party.

Undoubtedly the man was surprised, for he, of course, by that time considered himself the host of the party. On the other hand, he undoubtedly admired your obvious wish to do your part. It's better to get a reputation for over-zealousness in paying your own way, than to get one for being a sponge. Every invitation of this kind must be judged separately, and this time I think that it would have been better for you to have graciously become the guest of the party.

No Need to "Excuse My Glove"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly advise me if it is proper for a young lady to say, "Excuse my glove" when shaking hands without removing the glove? R. S.

Good form does not require that a woman remove her glove before she shakes hands. Therefore, she does not have to mention the fact that she is not removing her glove.

Household Hints

For stove polish stains. If cold water and soap will not remove them, try benzine, kerosene or gasoline.

A jellied salad for dessert: Apples, nuts and celery, or chopped raw cabbage, molded into lemon jelly is deliciously served on crisp lettuce with mayonnaise. Custard cups make nice molds for the jellied salad.

To remove mud stains from clothing let them dry, then brush out as much as possible and apply a mixture of salt and flour. Leave for a day or two in a dry place and brush off. When brushing a mud-stained garment, do not brush against the warp, but from top to bottom.

Often it is necessary to hang clothing in the cellar during the spring months. If two lines are strung evenly about 2 feet apart you will find that the garments may very successfully be dried by pinning one side to one line and the other side of the garment to the other. A great many clothes may be accomodated in a relatively small space.

Economize

Don't cast aside the scarf or pillow case just because the hemstitching breaks. Crochet either a very narrow insertion or some hairpin lace and insert it in place of the hemstitching, cutting carefully through the center of the stitching so as to leave a finished edge to which the lace may be sewed.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Laughter Is the Twin to Physical Exercise

It is not surprising to me that so many people go to the movies. The presence of crowds at places of entertainment is proof conclusive of the need for relaxation and fun.

Dr. Copeland

Men and women go to such places to forget their troubles. Lovers go because there is no place else to be near each other. Worried business men and tired women go for refreshment and recuperation.

It is truly refreshing to listen to the spontaneous laughter. The bright and eager faces indicate that new and pleasant thoughts have been aroused. There is an atmosphere of happiness.

We need happiness. Nobody can brood and worry and scheme and plan, going backward and forward over the beaten paths of thoughts, without impairing health and vigor. A good laugh is like a spray of clear water over a dusty porch. It washes away the waste products of overworked brain cells. It leaves the mind cleared for better work, for normal action.

I am writing this just after seeing Charley Chaplin in "City Lights." It is excruciatingly funny, but clean and wholesome. Running through it is a thread of tender romance.

I left the theater with aching sides but cleared brain. After a brisk walk to my home I sit here in cheerful mood, rested and refreshed, ready for every duty.

It is fatal to health to be too serious. The nerves must be relaxed and the blood made to circulate more freely. We need change from the regular routine.

To be able to play is one of God's richest blessings. We need not go to the other extreme, of course, but each of us should have an occasional recess from the hard school of life.

Why do we exercise? To set the heart to work and the blood to more rapid flow through the body.

Emotion does the same things to us. I mean pleasant emotion, of course. Interesting conversation, an exciting book, an interest-holding play, a good movie—it makes no difference what the experience is so long as it holds the interest and makes us think pleasant thoughts.

The sluggish circulation is stimulated to greater activity. The mind races along at unusual speed. The brain is cleared by the cleansing streams of blood.

In short, emotion of this sort does for us what exercise does. It is a twin to physical exercise.

Learn to play. Indulge the habit of play. Get away from the humdrum of life now and again. You will gain health and lengthen life by habitual, temperate indulgence in wholesome entertainment.

The Beauty Shop

By HELEN FOLLETT

The complexion has its own oiling system, which is necessary for its preservation and well being. The purpose of the sebaceous glands is to lubricate the outer surface, to keep it from flaking and going into the rough. When creams are applied, they are supplementing the work of nature, so there is no reason why anyone should have any feeling against their use. Certain thin, cleansing oils are excellent and effective means of removing dirt; they even remove the surplus supply of fat exuded by the pores.

Many a plain Jane has a little gold mine of undiscovered beauty. If she does a bit of prospecting, she may dig up nuggets of pulchritude. There's the gal who thought she must always pull her wool over her eyes. One day, she brushed her hair straight back and discovered a brow of alabaster loveliness. More than one woman who fancied she possessed a poor figure became blessed with a graceful supple one when she took up physical education, learned how to stand and walk. A new coiffure transforms an uninteresting head of hair into a structure of beauty. So it goes.

Vanishing creams have one purpose, to act as an agent to make powder adhere to the skin. They don't take the place of cold creams or heavy emollients suitable for massaging. They come in flesh and rachelle tints, much more desirable than the dead white that was once popular.

Plumptitudinous ladies should not sneak bonbons, which are concentrated food and build fat cells. The human constitution needs some sugar and the rotund femmes should get theirs in fruit juices or honey. Women who would add a few pounds are at liberty to nibble candy, and for them we specially recommend molasses squares encased with chocolate. The time for sweets is after the meal.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Advance — Local List Irregular

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN BY MARKET

Stocks Open at Advance, Dip, But Quickly Rally; 2-Point Gains Common

NEW YORK, June 3.—(AP.)—The stock market's spirits improved measurably today. Although some further liquidation had to be absorbed after a strong early advance, prices quickly rallied again when this pressure was limited.

Leading shares had shown much better resistance yesterday, and their refusal to yield much more than the gains of the opening rally this forenoon indicated one of those oversold position out of which shorts hasten to scramble. The day's news was mixed in character, so that the market seemed to be influenced chiefly by its own internal position.

Gains of a couple of points or more developed in leading shares generally, including U. S. Steel.

Oils had an early rally on the Socony-Vacuum merger news, but then settled back.

Sentiment gained courage from the announcement that at least two large local banks had cut their margin requirements on loans to brokers to 20 per cent from 25. Officials of one institution explained that the action was taken because the bank believed stock prices were on a level which made the lower margin conservative. The effect, of course, would be to stimulate borrowing. Liberal reductions were made after the first crash in 1929, and others have followed.

The midweek reports from trade were largely negative. Steel ingot production, according to Iron Age, is down to 42 per cent of capacity, compared with 44 per cent a week ago, but the review stressed the slow rate of the seasonal recession from the spring peak and pointed out that the inevitable release of deferred needs should accelerate the rise in demand when the turning point is reached. Trade circles look for the industry to reach its summer low in July.

Loadings of freight were up 7,339 cars in the week ended May 23, but the improvement was somewhat less than seasonal, although it was larger than occurred a year ago. Electric power output, smaller because of the Memorial Day observance, cut down the rate of decline in comparison with 1930, and a pickup was noted in the states of the central industrial region where the use of power has been slack.

An 8-cent quotation on domestic copper emphasized the slowness of the demand for that metal and the desire to move existing stocks.

WHEAT FALLS TO NEW LOW

CHICAGO, June 3.—Wheat prices on American markets fell today to new low levels for the season on a report that the Federal Farm Board had withdrawn its support from the old crop.

June wheat, the last of the old crop futures, led the downturns with a 10-cent early drop at Duluth, 12½ cents at Minneapolis and 3¼ cents at Chicago.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The early and heavy movement of new crop wheat from the Southwest was said at the Farm Board today to have prompted the withdrawal of government support from the June wheat market.

At the board it was explained today that the Grain Stabilization Corporation had promised to continue wheat purchases in June only until such a time as the arrival of new wheat became a factor in the market.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Cotton opened steady today, unchanged to 5 points higher. Offerings were light following recent declines and were readily absorbed, with the active months selling about 8 to 10 points net higher right after the call. Heavy Selling Coming Into Shares of Dairy Firms Recently

Heavy selling has been coming into the dairy shares because of looming new competition just when the season of larger sales was approaching. Part of the supply represented pressure from bears on the group. However, the lower levels uncovered a number of stop orders which aided in establishing lower levels. Indications are that there will be a lower range of selling prices for dairy products generally and this will affect the earnings of these companies in the coming months. There has been little evidence of short covering thus far, despite the sharp declines.

Quiet liquidation has taken place in Warren Brothers at times in the past. During the bull market this was one of the popular pool issues. The latest selling is believed to reflect apprehension among holders regarding the continuation of the $3 common dividend as the stock has been selling to yield more than 14 per cent in the past few sessions.

It is learned that American Rolling Mill Company has been buying some of the company's 5 per cent notes, due 1948, in the open market. While earnings in the first quarter of the current year did not cover the interest on this obligation, conditions are somewhat better thus far in the second quarter. Company officials have expressed the view that these notes are in no danger.

The government crop report will be available a week from now showing the condition and indicated yield as of June 1, last. Private forecasts now appearing indicate that the anticipated expansion in the prospective winter wheat yield as of June 1 over May 1 will probably be offset by a sharp indicated reduction in the spring wheat crop. The average of private figures places the indicated winter crop on June 1 as 680,000,000 bushels as against 653,000,000 bushels reported by the government a month ago, and against last year's yield of 604,000,000 bushels. They make the indicated spring crop as of June 1 around 215,000,000 bushels due to low average condition and reduced acreage. The Canadian report is due the same day and is expected to indicate a 1931 crop of 310,000,000 bushels against an actual harvest of 398,000,000 bushels last year.

Most market observers are inclined to adhere to the belief that little in the way of real lasting stability can be expected to develop in the speculative market until stocks get down to a point where actual investment buying will be attracted. They feel that the market is now showing definite signs of becoming oversold for the first time in many weeks, and that accordingly something in the way of technical rallies may develop more frequently. But as yet there has been an absence of investment buying of a character and volume which would suggest the so-called "bargain-hunter" finds things really attractive. Perhaps that specie of trader, too, made a few miscalculations in the last year or so.

Evidently the Youngstown Sheet and Tube board is not able to visualize any signs of early improvement in the steel industry such as would have warranted maintenance of the $4 dividend in effect until yesterday. Directors of that company voted to halve the rate, ordering a quarterly payment of 50 cents a share against the last quarterly payment of $1 a share. The dividend was reduced at the previous meeting from $5 to a $4 basis. The action had been anticipated marketwise and very largely discounted, as indicated by the fact that the stock had been moving on a basis offering a yield of better than 10 per cent.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 3. — All deliveries of wheat in Chicago fell today to a new low price record for the season. Withdrawal of government sponsored agencies as buyers of old crop was chiefly responsible. July wheat, representing the new 1931 crop, quickly collapsed 2 cents a bushel and June wheat 3¼ cents.

Talk of extremely heavy yields of new wheat in harvest operations now in progress in Texas was a contributing bearish factor.

Coal Strikes Have Little Effect on Prices

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

STRIKES IN SEVERAL MINES in the Pittsburgh district are having little effect on coal prices. Quotations remain close to the low levels which have prevailed for several months.

While many strikes in the past have been responsible for panics among buyers and skyrocketing prices, the coal trade does not expect a repetition of this performance.

Industrial consumption of coal is at practically the lowest point since last January. Unless the strike spreads over the major portions of the Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio fields, little difficulty will be experienced in meeting the small requirements of industry at the present time.

Industrial stocks of coal are close to record low levels but buyers are showing no apprehension over a supply during the summer, even if labor troubles continue for several months.

Follows West Virginia Strikes

THE STRIKE IN THIS DISTRICT follows labor troubles which developed in the vicinity of Morgantown several weeks ago. About 18 mines were affected. The union was able to force seven of the mines to agree to a wage scale of 30 cents a ton for loading. The success of these efforts was undoubtedly an important factor in causing the development of strikes in mines here.

The strikes near Morgantown were responsible for the diversion of a large tonnage of production into the Pittsburgh district. Coal men report that the local strikes are diverting tonnage to mines near Fairmont.

The capacity for mining coal is so much in excess of consumption, even under peak business conditions, that labor troubles in any one district merely result in the passing of business to neighboring fields. Nothing short of a nationwide strike could affect the coal market at the present time. The miners are not sufficiently organized to strike on any but a local basis at present. The backbone of the United Mine Workers was broken in the last coal strike.

New Attack On Lake Rates

IN PROTESTING AGAINST the unfavorable report of the Interstate Commerce Commission special examiner in the lake cargo coal case, the Pittsburgh operators adopted a new line of attack. They charged that the commission does not have the power to adjust rates on a strictly competitive basis in disregard of the natural advantages of geographical location. They declared that rates may not be decreed by an administrative body to favor shippers geographically handicapped to assist them in competing for a market at the expense of nearby shippers.

This opens a new angle of the case. If the commission does not agree with this attitude it seems entirely possible that the case may eventually be brought before the courts since it might have a far-reaching effect on the powers of the commission and might greatly change many of the rate structures now in force. Recently the commission has tended to favor the establishment of rates on a mileage basis. Steel rates were adjusted to conform with this policy a short time ago.

U. S. DROPS OIL MERGER FIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 3.—(AP)—The government yesterday abandoned its effort to prevent the merger of the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company.

Announcing its intention not to carry the case to the Supreme Court, the Justice Department said an appeal "undoubtedly" would sustain the facts found by the District Court of Missouri, which declined to enjoin the merger. The department said:

"It has been determined that the government is not justified in prolonging this litigation by a futile appeal to the Supreme Court."

Jenny Decides to Take Her Daughter to Canada

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

CHAPTER XXIII.

Jennifer was like something wild, crouching beneath the wing of a protecting arm—the bare, gleaming arm of Jenny—her muddled eyes staring through the jungle of hair at Rarick, who, having released her wrists, stood back, flabbergasted.

"Shh-h-h, darling! I see."

"Make him see."

"Yes, yes. I'll make father see. Mother knows. Mother understands. Jennifer's nervous. Jennifer has had a bad dream and mother is going to take her away—far—up to the Canadian camp and get her rested and cured."

Jenny had wrested his moment from him, all right. A cry raged in the silence of his heart. There they crouched from him. The Jennys. "Papa," she had mouthed, like a child. So far as he could remember, she had never, even in her little-girlhood, called him that before.

What a curious thing to have happened! This little girl, this sick little girl, this pure, good, smart, terribly alien little girl, calling him "Papa." And Jenny had wrested his chance. Damn her!

ANSWER TO EDGERTON

No. No. No. God bless her! This bare-backed woman, with the ridges of her spine that were repulsive to him, was divine, at the moment, as she babbled sentimental mush to this girl!

"Sh-h-h, Jennifer! You're going to get well."

Her sobs began to subside as she looked out fearfully under the wing of her mother's arm.

"I'll get well if he will leave me alone."

"Sh-h-h! Father will leave you alone. Won't you, Rarick, if I promise to help little Jennifer, who wants to get well, to be rid of the idiotic notion that she is in love? Won't you, Rarick? Won't you?" said Jenny, in the monotony of singsong, rocking her body in soothing motion over the crouched figure of Jennifer.

"I won't ever see him again. I don't want ever—to see him again—"

"Sh! That's right. She won't ever see him again, Rarick. Don't cry, sweet! Mother will help you. Nothing has happened between them; and for you to see Berry would not only be absurd but dangerous. Your answer to Tom will only be the fact that Jennifer won't ever see Berry again. Isn't that right, Baby?"

"Yes, mother."

"We're going away for a little while. Up to the Canadian camp—to fish—and get well. I'll wire we're arriving." (Ramon could come up for a week.) "Aren't we, Jennifer?"

"Yes, darling."

"You hear, Rarick?" said Jenny, always rocking, always crooning. "We're going to camp—to rest—to get well."

He sat dumb in the pool of his defeat, glorying, in a curious, crooked way, in the power of this angular, eccentric woman he called wife, to mother his children, yet filled with a crushing, impotent anger that baffled and tortured him because he could not define it.

"You go now, Rarick, while Jenny puts Jennifer to bed and gives her a bromide to make her sleep. Sh-h, my sweet—"

"Put me to sleep, mother. Don't let me finish dressing to go out and meet him—"

"Sh-h! Now go, Rarick, while Jenny puts Jennifer to sleep."

With the sensation of having no sensation at all, Rarick pressed at the hand on his daughter and went stumbling from the room.

'Five and Ten' Synopsis

John G. Rarick, multi-millionaire chain store operator, buys a magnificent mansion after being urged by his wife, Jenny, and finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own inability to get close to Jennifer and Avery, his children. Jenny begins to be intrigued by Ramon Lopez, a gigolo. Avery, a college student, tires of school. Jennifer likes the handsome and rich Berry Rhodes, and Jenny urges her to try to win him. Berry kisses Jennifer while taking her to one of Leslie Edgerton's parties. Jennifer learns that Berry and Leslie had been married secretly. Ramon, saying that he has been neglecting his work to see Jenny, gets money from her. Rarick rushes to Jenny's boudoir after receiving a disturbing letter. The letter says that Jennifer is still seeing Berry.

Now Go On

In the 23 years since her brother's marriage, Hildegarde Rarick, teacher in the primary grades in the public schools of Keokuk, had visited him three times. Two of these highly ceremonious occasions had taken place before the migration east.

HELPED BROTHER

Miss Rarick was as full of principles regarding her relationship to her brother's rise to fortune, as a porcupine is full of quills. And, just so, she bristled with them.

From the very start, when rumor of Rarick's engagement to quite a wealthy St. Louis girl had come floating toward her on wings of exaggerated gossip, Miss Rarick had taken her stand.

Nine years his senior, she had never, to use her own phraseology, been beholden to him, and did not intend to begin to be so now. At well past fifty she was teaching the same grade in the same school, on practically the same basis she had taught at twenty. The check for $50 which had ultimately enabled Rarick to leave the farm for Keokuk, where he had boarded in the same house with his sister for two years, had come from Hildegarde.

He remembered this, and off and on for years had tried to ram down the resistance she put up against largesse from him; but she not only continued to refuse the slightest boon of any sort, but also vigorously resented any attempt on his part to merge her narrow path with what she was found of terming "the primrose one" of his family.

Rarick was on hand to meet her, and that fat Mr. Hellman, who handed her a telegram from Jenny, explaining Jennifer's influenza and imperative need of change, and which Miss Rarick strongly suspected the fat Mr. Hellman of having maneuvered to send himself, by some such device as wiring a friend in Buffalo to wire back in Jenny's name.

REFUSES FAVORS

As a matter of fact, the telegram had actually come from Jenny, due to sharp admonitions from Rarick, but nothing could have suited Miss Rarick better than this sudden and allegedly imperative absence of Jenny.

She was a strange and rather dread person to Rarick. A cold, remote older sister, whose attitude had always been unspoken grievance, and yet who never would permit him, by deed, the only gesture of which he seemed capable, where she was concerned, to remove some of the cause for that grievance.

The fact that Jenny and Hildegarde were congenitally uncongenial, Rarick's common sense had long since, after those first two harrowing weeks she had visited them when they were bride and groom in St. Louis, led him to accept without hope of retrieval.

But subsequently, Rarick considered that he had done everything possible, so far as his responsibility to this narrow, sloping-shouldered lady was concerned. Even in the first years of his rise to prosperity he had urged her to give up her teaching and live on the income he was beginning to be so well able to afford her.

Her consistency in her refusal to accept a favor from her brother remained flawless.

As Hellman expressed it inelegantly to his wife, "She's a virgin even in her financial relations with her brother."

The night she arrived, and sat with Rarick in her high-neck black silk, a turquoise four-leaf clover her sole jewel, Rarick, visualizing his glittering Jennys in their places at his dinner table of point-lace and gold plate, felt a surge of bewilderment.

Hildegarde was as hedged in by her grim principles as Jenny was by her lack of them.

"I think," she told her brother at the conclusion of a long meal devoted to the discussion of the Kansas coal strikes, closed shop conditions in Keokuk, the Protestant vote and a pointed dissertation on lax youth, "that I shall take a bus first thing tomorrow and ride down into the congested districts."

"I'll send some one down with you into some of my modern tenements."

"I don't suppose Jenny or the girl has much time to devote to study of that sort of thing."

How smug she was! The mere fact of the omnibus irritated him.

How joyless she was! Men digging in subway ditches, women on hospital cots in wards, were jocular in a way she had never been capable of in her life.

"That is how I shall spend tomorrow, Rarick. No need for you to bother about me. I shall take an omnibus down to the congested districts."

He looked at her and felt that his laughter came like a bray.

"Why not the Second avenue surface car?" he suggested. And then to himself, "You'll find it much more righteously uncomfortable."

A thought that he confessed to himself was more amusing than really valid, began to turn in Rarick's head during the following two weeks of his sister's visit.

INTERESTED IN GERKES

Hildegarde admired Gerkes. Sometimes Rarick suspected her of being more interested in Gerkes himself than in his collections, over which she craned a long, conscientious neck; but the fact remained that she assisted him in various catalogue work, classified some Eskimo needle-cases and Upper Magdalenian harpoons for him, and attended those of his lectures before the Anthropological Institute which were open to the general public.

Gerkes had countless times given voice to the wear and tear upon him of these lectures. Gerkes needed leisure, repose of mind, money, isolation. Hildegarde was past the time when the secluded walks of life would be irksome. Gerkes had constantly spoken about his intention of one day seeking out again what to him had been the beauty and fine seclusion of Alaska. Why not? Hildegarde had no youth to shed. Both she and Gerkes, for that matter, were adults about life. If Gerkes was playful about it all, it was partly because his lust for the truth of it revealed to him the unexpected grins, like crevices occurring in terrific masses of granite.

Why not? Given these two people; a dower of a million; facilities; leisure for research. A million for every new truth. Two million! Why not?

DAILY SHORT STORY

Criticism of Novel Enables Girl to Decide

Dedication

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

If anyone had ever hinted, in the presence of Mrs. Winona Vinton that she kept a boarding house she would have turned red with righteous indignation.

She kept a few "paying guests."

The old house had once been a mansion in this suburb, but at this time it was just a roomy old house.

It was a rather nice place to live, at that, because it was only a half-hour trip to the city and it afforded quiet, a spacious back yard with flowers and shade trees, and Mrs. Vinton set an ample table.

Peggy Northrup, who came from upstate to work in the law offices of Dwight & Dwight, was told by the elder Mr. Dwight about the place. It was in the same suburb where he lived and he had transacted Mrs. Vinton's small amount of legal business.

Peggy liked the place.

She was quite happy there.

She was happier when Gregory Mayne came there to live because she admired him immensely.

DISTINGUISHED YOUNG MAN

Gregory was one of those really handsome young men of the sort to make the average girl's heart take a few extra flutters.

The evening he first appeared for dinner Mrs. Vinton introduced them.

"Miss Northrup," she said, "has a responsible position with a legal firm."

"Mr. Mayne," she went on, turning to Peggy, "devotes his time to literature."

"Oh, really? How splendid—are you an author, Mr. Mayne?" Peggy asked.

"Oh yes, in a small way, Miss Northrup."

"You can see, beamed Mrs. Vinton, "that he is quite modest and self-effacing."

It pleased her to make all of her paying guests seem as great and important as possible.

"Are you studying law?" Gregory asked.

"No indeed. I make out the usual small things—legal forms and the like, and keep track of them."

"Indeed."

Peggy wondered if he were "ritzing" her, but she decided that he was not.

They became very good friends.

There was a charm about Gregory Mayne that gave Peggy quite a thrill. And despite his youth, he was so distinguished. He was even literary in appearance, according to the old standard. He wore his hair combed straight back and rather long, he preferred the black Windsor ties and his glasses were attached to a little black ribbon. He also was addicted to spats and a cane.

Now and then Gregory took Peggy out to the local picture house.

DIFFERENT FROM GREGORY

He was such an excellent conversationalist that Peggy was charmed. And the manner in which he could point out the glaring defects in the pictures was amazing! Peggy wouldn't have noticed them if he had not explained.

Peggy could not go as often as she would have liked to with Gregory Mayne, because she worked a great deal in her room.

There was another young man—Wilson Thayer.

She met him first in the law offices of Dwight & Dwight. It seems, from what she could learn then, that Thayer was a sort of "handy man" in the Seabright Publishing Company's offices.

Peggy liked him well enough, but she had a "comparative" mind, she told herself. She was always comparing things and people.

Take Mr. Thayer and Mr. Mayne, for instance—Mr. Mayne was a handsome young man—unusually handsome. He was distinguished in appearance, he was dignified in his conversation.

Mr. Thayer was larger, somewhat heavier. He wore business suits, much the same as a merchant or broker would wear—no distinction to them. His hair was thick but straight, it didn't wave the way Gregory's hair did. And his eyes were a bluish gray, wide apart and keen, and his nose was more Roman than Grecian.

No, he wasn't at all like Gregory Mayne.

Mrs. Vinton explained to Gregory Mayne that Miss Northrup must hold some very high position because she knew for a fact that she had an amazingly large bank account.

Gregory Mayne was interested in this a great deal.

Here would be an ideal match!

He could not well afford matrimony under ordinary circumstances, but to marry a charming girl like Peggy and have her continue to earn money would make it all "jake" with him, although he would never had admitted to Peggy that he even knew such a word. He surely worked hard to keep up his literary appearance. It hadn't occurred to him that in this age and day most of our successful literary men look more like bond salesmen.

PEGGY SURPRISED

Wilson Thayer was beginning to make love to Peggy.

She used to sit, after working hard in her room at home, and ponder over it.

One Saturday afternoon Peggy came home with a novel under her arm.

Gregory Mayne was on the veranda and greeted her.

"What's this, Peggy, another best-seller?" he asked.

He took the book and looked at it. It was:

"OAKS AND WILLOWS"
By Martha Maybridge

"Oh, my dear—let me warn you as a friend," Mayne said, "do not waste your time on it—it's trash, I assure you, absolute trash."

Peggy looked at him in surprise.

"Of course it is all right if one cares to skim over this light stuff, but it isn't literature or anything. I am sure you prefer the more substantial reading, something with thought, with style. Now this Martha Maybridge has written a worse flop than her first novel—"

"Have you read them, Gregory?"

"Oh, yes—skimmed through—in my profession one has to dip into everything, you know. This is an excellent thing as an example of what not to write or to bother reading. Her first novel was called—er—some silly title"

"Orchids and Violets."

"Why yes—dear me, can it be that you liked either of those?"

Peggy nodded.

Soon after this Gregory suggested to Peggy that they be married. Peggy said that she would consider it.

Wilson Thayer pleaded with Peggy to become Mrs. Wilson Thayer.

Peggy told him she would have to think it over.

She wasn't very happy when, in a certain book review department, she came upon a criticism of "Oaks and Willows" that fairly tore it asunder. She spoke to Thayer about this.

"Oh, we get roasts now and than from saps like that Gregory Mayne," he said.

"Did he write this?"

"I presume so, he's the literary critic on this sheet.

ANOTHER NOVEL

Time went on. Peggy wanted several things, one was to be sure that she would make the right choice, matrimonially.

Gregory began to urge with greater frequency that they be married.

She put him off and off.

One day she brought home the newest novel by Martha Maybridge.

"I didn't know she had another one out," Gregory said, "it's strange, I usually get my copy the moment it is off the press."

"Oh, I know Martha Maybridge—she gave me this advance copy to bring to you, she's autographed it for you," Peggy explained.

Gregory Mayne opened and read the dedication, which was:

"To G. M., who is one of them.

How many worth-while books do critics write?

How many of their plays are ever played?

How come they think their judgment must be right—

And why the Heck were critics ever made?"

Gregory was furious.

"If you know this dumb Maybridge woman, bring her out and let me try and show her just how rotten her novels are," he blustered.

"All right, tell me, I'm Martha Maybridge," Peggy said.

And she was, but she became Mrs. Thayer a few weeks later.

Weigh Them Separately

Plan of Seven Common Pleas Judges to Run for Election as Group Is Against Public Interest.

Four years ago the Republican organization picked a group of nine out of the many candidates for nine places that were to be filled on the bench of Common Pleas Court. The machine asked the citizens to support its nine candidates as a group in the primary election.

Judge Richard W. Martin vigorously attacked the slate. He said:

"It is un-American because it violates the spirit of fair play to all members of the party. It is un-American because it sets at naught the law designed to secure freedom of choice. . . . There is no place where the un-American and dangerous character of such an attempt is more manifest than in the office of judge."

The people of Allegheny County agreed with Judge Martin. They rebuked the machine by smashing its judiciary slate. They rejected three of the organization's candidates, electing Judges Martin, Patterson and Gray in their stead.

Now the people are again to be asked to vote for candidates for the judiciary as a group. The seven judges of Common Pleas Court whose terms expire next January have decided to join forces for the campaign and to solicit support not individually but jointly.

This self-created slate has no more to commend it than that set up by the Republican machine. It is not meant by this to imply that all or any of the judges lack merit. What is meant is that it is improper to ask the voters to consider them as a group.

Candidates for judgeships must be weighed independently, on their individual merits and entirely apart from their affiliations with other judges or other candidates. Only by giving them separate consideration can a first-class judiciary be secured.

A Vicious Bill

The Greenstein Act, Which Abridges Freedom of Speech, Should Be Vetoed.

In the closing days of the session there was sneaked through the Legislature, without public hearing or even a word of notice to those chiefly concerned, a vicious piece of legislation known as the Greenstein bill.

It is "an act to make it a misdemeanor for any person licensed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to practice any profession having to do with public health, or any other profession licensed by the Commonwealth having to do with the relief of any human physical defect or deficiency, to advertise special inducements or fixed prices for any services, appliances or material which are a necessary adjunct to such professional services."

The act, in short, makes it a crime for an optometrist to advertise that he will fit glasses for a fixed price, for a dentist to advertise that he will extract a tooth for a fixed price, for a pharmacist to advertise that he will fit a support for a crippled leg for a fixed price, and so on.

The "misdemeanor" thus created is to be punished by a fine of up to $200, and on second conviction the "offender's" license is to be automatically revoked.

The bill was instigated by doctors, who object to the advertising of fixed prices for services. Some of them want no interference with their own policy of charging whatever they think the patients are able to pay—a policy which has made the excessive cost of medical attention one of the burning questions of the day to persons in modest circumstances whose self-respect will not permit them to plead poverty or accept charity.

There would be no objection to the Greenstein bill if it were designed to prevent fraudulent advertising and put quacks out of business; but in the form in which it has been passed it is nothing less than unwarranted and capricious interference by the state with private business that is none of its concern.

The act abridges that freedom of press and speech which is guaranteed by Article I of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and, if it should become law, would establish a dangerous precedent.

Suppose, for example, that garage men should adopt the policy of the doctors and regulate their prices according to the income of their customers. They could, with perfect propriety, demand of the Legislature the enactment of a law making it a misdemeanor to advertise that a tire would be repaired, or any other automobile service rendered, or necessary material supplied, at a fixed price.

The Greenstein bill should be vetoed.

Old Pennsylvanianisms

Col. Shoemaker Has Done Good Work in Preserving Quaint Words Rapidly Passing into Disuse.

"All—Completed, gone. 'The candy is all'."

That is the first definition in a curious pamphlet compiled by Col. Henry W. Shoemaker and entitled "Thirteen Hundred Old Time Words of British, Continental or Aboriginal Origins, Still or Recently in Use Among the Pennsylvania Mountain People."

Col. Shoemaker, publisher of the Altoona Tribune, is now serving as United States minister to Bulgaria.

His definition of "all" brings to mind the little Allentown girl who, appealing to her mother to verify an assertion that the caboose always was at the end of the train, said:

"Ain't, when the little red house goes by, it makes the train all?"

Col. Shoemaker's list contains many words which doubtless never found their way into print before, yet which are familiar to old Pennsylvanians, especially to those who have lived in the country.

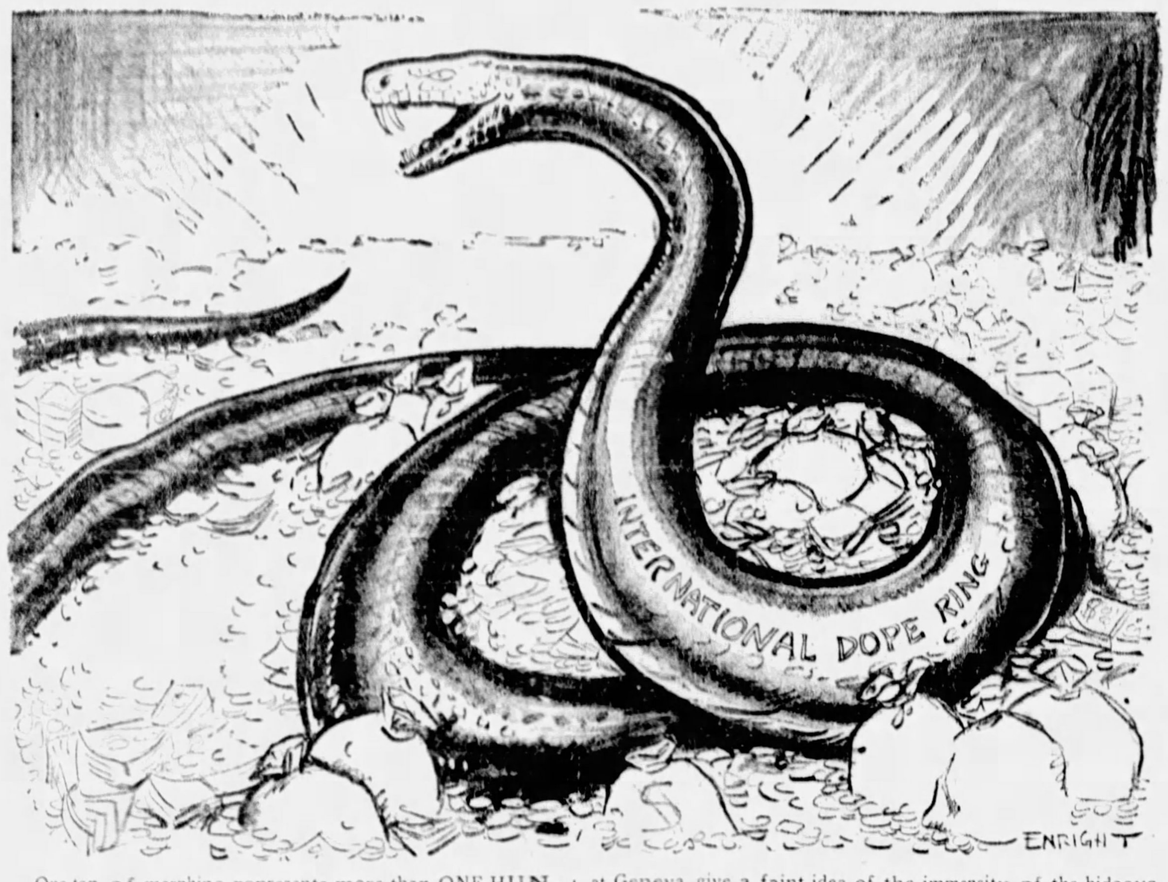
Notwithstanding the diligence of his search and the length of his list, not a few old Pennsylvanianisms have escaped him. For example: Pawnhoss—scrapple, a food prepared of scraps of meat and corn meal; glaky (derived from the Scotch "glaikit")—thoughtless, careless; grinny—a chipmunk or striped squirrel; spatsy—a sparrow.

These words and innumerable others, including most of those in Col. Shoemaker's brochure, are not to be found in dictionaries, yet were commonly understood in considerable sections of Pennsylvania not so many years ago.

Automobiles, paved roads and radio sets are standardizing our speech and driving quaint colloquialisms into disuse. Col. Shoemaker has rendered a service in preserving them.

Scotch This Cobra

(Copyright, 1931.)



One ton of morphine represents more than ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOSES, and the Port of Bushire, Persia, alone sent out THREE HUNDRED EIGHTY-TWO TONS of dope last year. FIFTEEN TONS were delivered in New York. Other shipments came from Turkey, India, Straits Settlements, Egypt.

ONE TON of opium and morphine is enough for ALL LEGITIMATE USES of medicine for ONE year.

These figures, obtained by Winifred Black, Universal Service writer, from official reports to the League of Nations at Geneva, give a faint idea of the immensity of the hideous traffic.

To curb these shipments means to curtail the profits of the Opium Bloc. Greed of this Bloc of Old World nations will bar any effective action at the Geneva Anti-Narcotic Conference.

Is the Dope Ring TOO RICH to be exterminated? Not if the nations of the Western Hemisphere band together in the common cause. And this nation should take the lead.

Tips for Modern Lovers

1. Don't cuddle her or crush her in your arms the first time you find yourself alone with her in a taxicab. If she's an attractive girl, she is probably so sick of the "taxicab snuggle" that it makes her want to gargle buttermilk.

* * *

2. Don't compliment her nose—she probably hates it. Every woman does. Concentrate on her EYES; because there never lived a woman who didn't think that there was "SOMETHING—je ne sais quoi—about her eyes!"

3. Don't imagine, for a moment, when you put your face against hers, that she gets the same thrill out of your whisk-broom chin as you get out of the touch of her velvet cheek. Go gently.

4. Call her "Honey" or "Sweetheart" or "Darling" or "Sweet Thing." The old, old pet-names are more potent than any that you can invent. And "Cutey" is always good, no matter whether she weighs 98 or 200.

* * *

5. Always remember that AGE is a dangerous subject. Never try to guess a woman's age; no man can. Just remember that no girl is over 19 until she's 30; over 29 until she's 40; or over 39 until she's 50.

* * *

6. Don't tell her that you "like older women," just because you suspect that she's a little overripe. Keep up her illusion, that to YOU, she's always a flapper. If you think that she's over 40, call her "Kid."

7. Follow your intuition, not your impulse, in deciding the psychological moment for the kiss. Never kiss her, just because you WANT to—wait until you are sure that SHE wants you to.

8. Don't always assume that, because she gushes over you, she is trying to make you; she may be merely trying to make another man—jealous.

* * *

9. Don't fancy, because she falls for you, that it is because you are irresistible. It may be merely because you are the only fairly personable man around the summer resort; and she MUST have something to love. She may have a real romance, or at least a "spare," in the city.

* * *

10. Don't pat her on the shoulder. Only a wife or a pet dog regards a pat on the back as a caress.

Remember that love, romance or even a mild flirtation takes TIME. The trouble with most American men is that they WON'T take time. They want to hurry through a love-affair as they gulp down a drink. The European sips his wine slowly; that's why it gives him a glow and a kick—without the headache.

* * *

Many a man with no looks or charm to speak of has managed to make himself "God's gift to women," just by observing the fine points of the love-game—and taking his TIME.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 3.—Alarmists often sound warnings that Manhattan Island can no longer stand the weight of its mammoth towers. They fear that the millions of tons of concrete and steel will prove too much for the earth's crust and that some day with a despairing glug-glug the metropolis will sink.

But expert geologists hoot the idea. They say human ingenuity cannot put too great a strain on the island's surface. It is true underneath the top layer are shifting quick sands, natural springs and deep pools, but beyond is an immovable base.

Day by day builders are honeycombing the depths. Subways are slicing out enormous caverns. Still there is no possibility of collapse. At the bottom of it all is an early rock formation that is as firm as Gibraltar, so flinty that nothing can shake it.

Technical names for the upper crust are schist and dolomite. They require cutting drills of the highest pressure to make the slightest nick. Boring through them is an engineering feat. A tidal wave might possibly sway New York buildings, but underneath it would hold.

The bottom floor of Manhattan, in instances, is more than 500 feet below surface, which seems enormously deep, yet almost every other very large city has to go deeper to entrench its topping towers. Chicago, par example. And also London.

New York builders use huge caissons to go through the muck, sands and water to reach rock bottom. These caissons are filled with concrete, and thus become connecting links that never snap. They would, the experts aver, resist all earthquakes.

Workers find the below surface labour intensely dramatic. In digging the foundation of one skyscraper they came across many relics. Hulks of clipper ships, now and then a pirate's treasure, ancient pottery are often unearthed.

Recently I saw Peggy Joyce, whose name has not studded these trivialities for quite a spell, in a vaudeville skit. The dramatic high spot was when, to prove her loyalty to her consort broke in the market, she stripped off her jewels and dropped them in his lap. And Peggy Joyce, sans a single piece of jewelry that made her famous, was more attractive to my notion than she has ever been before.

A cocktail party in New York is not quite complete without at least one of those blond and languid-eyed boys with a Byronic collar—named Derek or Napier. And who affirms with a "Gad, yes." To impressionable ladies they seem to suggest a bench in the warm violet dusk, the poetical plish-plash of a fountain and overhead the thin scimitar of a moon. But for those of us who stand around in everyone's way, completely unnoticed, they are just pains in the neck.

I was beached for a moment with one of the Dereks at a tea. Lacking something brighter to say I ventured: "Hot in town this summer!" He surveyed his meticulously polished nails, stifled a yawn and finally replied: "It usually is every summer." And if I had been in a rocking chair I would have rocked myself silly—I was that embarrassed.

Few have received so much publicity as Roxy, the movie man. Yet not many ever heard of Mrs. Roxy. A reporter flushed her out of her cloister the other day for a brief interview. It develops that she is a most self-effacing lady, rarely going to the theater or other public places. Her spare time is spent in charity work, nursing the sick, among whom she is known and beloved as "The Lady in Gray." Another wife whose husband is always in the spotlight but who is herself never seen in public is Mrs. Otto Kahn.

Somehow I always feel as though I'd like to take a running, youthful jump over a bonfire after passing DeWolf Hopper or James J. Corbett on the street. They are generally on their way to the Lamb's around noon day. Hopper, past 70, is straight as an arrow. And Gentleman Jim, in his 60's suggests a lithe runner awaiting the crack of the pistol. As Walter Catlett once cracked: "A couple of gland gents."

During a long wakefulness last night I got to wondering what the Prince of Wales says when he comes home from a super-sales trip and finds the King all crouped up. I wondered if he said: "Say, Dad, can't you let me even go to South America without sloshing around without your rubbers? Are you jealous of my publicity? Pull yourself together!"

YOUNG'S THEORY OF LIGHT

By Archibald Henderson

Today, when the study of light in all its manifestations is recognized as of the highest importance, the name of Thomas Young is often mentioned because of his notable formulation of the undulatory theory of light. In our time, the late A. A. Michelson has made notable contributions to the study of light, and was probably the leading authority on the subject at the time of his death. Einstein has made light-velocity a leading feature of his special relativity theory, assuming it to be a constant for all inertial systems. The fundamental element in Young's theory is the ether, which Einstein regards merely as a medium for the transmission of energy, without any particularly significant attributes.

Thomas Young was a scientist of a very profound intellect. Indeed, it is not exaggeration to say that he was far in advance of his day. For example, in the effort to prove that light was produced by chains of waves, he resorted to the phenomenon known as "Newton's rings." This aroused, for some reason, the ire of Lord Brougham, who made a caustic attack upon Young in the Edinburgh Review. Fortunately for Young, the famous Fresnel resumed Young's researches and made the same discoveries, so that Lord Brougham was discredited and Young brilliantly triumphed.

Thomas Young was born at Milverton, in Somersetshire, England, on June 13, 1773, the son of Quaker parents. He showed an extraordinary aptitude for linguistics at a very early age; and it is said that at 14 he was able to translate parts of the Bible into no fewer than 14 different languages.

When he came of age, he went to London to study medicine, completing his medical education at Edinburgh and Goettingen. In 1801 he was appointed professor of natural philosophy at the Royal Institution, and the following year was elected foreign secretary of the Royal Society, a position he held for the remainder of his life.

In the field of optics, his most brilliant discoveries were made. He is the first man to give a true description of the cause of astigmatism as well as a statement of the optical constants of the human eye. It has been generally conceded that he deserved the title, accorded him, of the founder of the science of physiological optics.

Young's fame chiefly rests upon his formulation of the undulatory theory of light, and the experiments he carried out to demonstrate it. He was in line with Huyghens, who was the first to advance the theory that the sensation of light was due to the imprint upon the eye of minute waves; and in opposition to Newton, who thought that the sensation of light was due to inconceivably minute particles of matter impinging upon the retina. By his principle of interference it is now believed that Young satisfactorily demonstrated his theory.

It was said by Helmholtz that Young's mind was one of the most profound the world has ever produced. After a life of distinction as a physician and scientist, he died on May 10, 1829.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A Mother Singing

Oh, to hear a mother singing
As she lulls her babe to sleep,
Dreaming of the happy future
While the purple shadows creep!

When the shades of dusk are falling
And the daisies close their eyes,
When the whip-poor-will is calling
As the winds of night arise.
With the moon's slim crescent swinging
In the golden-hearted west,
Then how sweet the mother's singing
To the baby on her breast.

Many wish to hear the voices
That have won the world's acclaim,
They would add to plaudits ringing
With the glory of a name;
But I choose the twilight bringing
Rest to weary hands and eyes,
And a mother's voice that's singing
Tender, loving lullabies.

CHAMPION TUNNEY AND HIS CHARMING WIFE ON THE SHORE OF THE DEAD SEA

These three pictures should interest you, for "one picture well chosen tells more than 10,000 words can tell."

First you see Gene Tunney, who wisely collected his million or two and then, while still champion, got out of the boxing game, which is a disagreeable game, to put it mildly. He is standing on the shore of the Dead Sea, in Palestine, with his remarkably charming, beautiful and intelligent wife beside him.

Next you see the former champion floating on the surface of the Dead Sea. He floats for two reasons—first, because he is a good swimmer, and, second, because you can't sink in the Dead Sea, even if you want to.

The waters of that ancient sea, which ever grow saltier and saltier, are so heavy that they weigh more than the human body that seeks to displace them.

If the air were as heavy as the waters of the Dead Sea, you could float in the air also, but you couldn't breathe it. So everything is best as it is.

The lower of the three pictures presents an interesting little Japanese girl, whose cunning name is Miyo-Ko Miyamori.

She is the courageous 19-year-old daughter of a prosperous Japanese whose business is brewing liquor out of rice. They call it "rice wine."

This young lady demonstrates that whatever ANYBODY can do a Japanese girl can do. You ask, "What has she to do with Gene Tunney?" and we answer, nothing at all, they never saw each other, but perhaps when Mr. Tunney sees this picture he will say to himself, "I beat the world's champion fighting men and carried away the championship. I wouldn't start that fighting again for a good deal. It's tiresome.

"But there is still the air, I haven't beaten THAT. I think I shall take to flying."

deal of difference to aviation, although Mr. Tunney undoubtedly would be a GOOD flier.

But if Tunney went into it, thousands of young boys and men would be interested and turn their minds to aviation.

What the beautiful Mrs. Tunney would say about "Air Pilot" Tunney remains to be heard. It might not meet with her approval.

The picture of Tunney floating on his back in the Dead Sea and the little Japanese parachute jumper are interesting as showing how small the world is growing.

One of these photographs was taken in the Holy Land, another far off on the Japanese shores of the Pacific. And they appear here side by side.

ISN'T IT SO?

Many a live man has been fooled by a dead sure thing.

The men who wave the red flag invariably furnish their own bull.

The scandalmongers get plenty of the modern girls, even if fashions don't.

All the world's a stage, and it's largely up to us whether the performance is comedy or tragedy.

There is no one so wise that he does not slip sometimes.

A good after-dinner address says nothing, humorously, in a hurry.

The less a man knows, the easier it is for him to make up his mind.

No woman is ever satisfied with the way another woman arranges the furniture.
